

Police try to serve court notices

State, strikers talks collapse

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Negotiations between the state and two striking social workers unions broke down Tuesday when state troopers tried to serve court notices on union leaders.

Both sides reported significant progress in the talks, which were recessed until 10 a.m. today after union officials fled the session to avoid the policemen.

"I've given the policemen one-and-a-half hours to serve the notices on the union leaders at the motel," said Attorney General Robert P. Kane. "If they can't get them there, they'll be delivered at their homes tonight."

The union posted four hefty members at the door of the meeting room who were ready to block the troopers from entering. However, by the time the troopers were ready to serve the papers union leaders had fled out a back door.

The papers notify Edward Purcell of the Pennsylvania

Social Services Union and Edward Farrell of the Pennsylvania Employment Security Employees Association to be in Commonwealth Court for a hearing at 2 p.m. today.

The service of the notices is a key to the Justice Department's suit to force some 2,000 Bureau of Employment Security workers back on the job.

The 12,000 members of the unions have been on strike since July 1, and the action has crippled the mailing of unemployment checks to nearly a half million jobless Pennsylvanians, according to Kane.

Originally, state police delivered the papers to Farrell's home on Sunday. However, Commonwealth Court Judge Genevieve Blatt ruled Tuesday the police failed to follow court rules and said the papers must be served again.

The two union officials have repeatedly been able to avoid the state troopers. They registered at the Host Inn, where negotiations are being held, under assumed names. Purcell told one policeman his name was "Tim Long" when the trooper approached him Monday.

"If there's any clear and present danger involved here at all its on the part of the governor and the state police," said Stephen Sheller, the attorney for the PIESEA.

The court argument on the state's injunction suit was scheduled to begin Tuesday, but it was canceled until 2 p.m. today when Sheller asked the federal court in Philadelphia to take over.

He told Judge Blatt that the federal court should hear the case because unemployment programs in Pennsylvania are funded by the federal government, an argument countered by Deputy Attorney General Lawrence Silver.

"This is just one more attempt on the part of the union to avoid the court," Silver said. "The attempt by this union to avoid service is an irresponsible act."

U.S. District Court Judge Herbert A. Fogel scheduled a hearing in Philadelphia for 11 a.m. today. Judge Blatt said she decided to wait for the federal ruling before her consideration of the state's case.

Commissioners get raises

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The Pennsylvania House Tuesday voted to give pay increases ranging from 50 to 60 per cent for the five members of the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission.

The bill passed 123-69 and was sent to the Senate. The House had defeated the same bill one week ago by a narrow margin.

The measure passed the same day that the Senate Rules Committee approved the nomination of Peter J. Camiel, the Philadelphia Democratic party chairman, to serve a 10-year term on the turnpike commission. Camiel was nominated two weeks ago by Gov. Milton J. Shapp.

Under the bill, the salary of commission Chairman Egidio Cerilli of Westmoreland County will go from $17,000 to $25,000 a year. The salaries of the four commission members will go from $15,000 to $24,000.

Commissioners also get use of a state limousine. The commission meets twice a month.

"We all know that these are traditionally political plums," complained Rep. H. Harrison Haskell, R-Crawford. "I'd like to know what these men do to earn their current salaries?"

It's official: Ford seeking election

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gerald R. Ford, the unelected president who came to power because of Watergate, Tuesday formally announced his 1976 candidacy for a full term and promised to run an "open and aboveboard" campaign.

Ford, who was Richard M. Nixon's appointed vice president and ultimate successor, made his long-expected announcement in an unusually low-key, three-minute statement read to reporters in the Oval Office.

Although this will be his first campaign for national office, Ford was relying on the nation's historical penchant for incumbents and 25 years as a congressional campaigner when he predicted victory for himself — as "always."

Ford, who will turn 62 next week, also addressed rumors that his wife, Betty, and four children were cool to the idea. He declared emphatically that he was running with the "strong support of my family and friends" and Mrs. Ford, a victim of breast cancer, later added she was not surprised.

Riding a new crest of popularity, the President said he intended to do three things — run a clean campaign, be president of all the people and never neglect that duty.

"I intend to conduct an open and aboveboard campaign," Ford said in an obvious comparison to the 1972 Watergate election crimes that brought down his predecessor nearly a year ago.

"I want every delegate and every vote I can get ... (but) within the spirit and the letter of the law and without compromising the principles for which I have stood all my public life."

While most of his predecessors have chosen a public forum to declare their candidacies, Ford personally chose the Oval Office in an effort to emphasize his "President first" theme.

His last announcement from the Oval Office last Sept. 8, was the unconditional pardon of Nixon for all crimes committed in office. That bombshell created a public furor and a severe ebb in the President's popularity.

But the polls now indicate Ford has recovered most of his early popularity, despite the nation's economic woes. And that was reflected clearly in the mood at the White House as aides predicted Ford would prevail over the conservative opposition in his own party and the more than a dozen contenders for the Democratic nomination in 1976.

When Ford was asked about victory, he replied, "I always assume that."

Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss responded to Ford's announcement by promising his party would find "an equally likeable and honorable" candidate.

Ford, who had already indicated his intentions by establishing a campaign committee, announced in the company of his new election aides — former Army Secretary Howard Callaway of Georgia, the campaign manager; California industrialist David Packard, the finance chairman; former White House counsel Dean Burch, head of an advisory committee; and former assistant Secretary of Defense Robert C. Moot, the treasurer.

He said he would "not forget my initial pledge to be President of all the people" and "seek the support of all who believe in the fundamental values of duty, decency and constructive debate..."

GARBAGE NEWS — National Enquirer reporter Jay Gourley ponders over his own bags of garbage Tuesday after he was caught going through Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's garbage in Washington, D.C. Gourley, assigned to dig a story out of Kissinger's garbage, avoided arrest. Kissinger said he was "revolted."

Simon says reduce taxes for investors, companies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Treasury Secretary William Simon said Tuesday the administration will ask Congress to cut corporate income taxes, perhaps by as much as $15 billion, and to lower taxes on investment income.

However, Simon said no decision had been made yet whether to ask that current lower individual tax rates be continued into 1976. He said Congress should treat these individual cuts, which expire Dec. 31, as a separate issue.

Simon told the House Ways and Means Committee, now considering a tax revision bill, that it would take "an enormous educational job" to convince the American people that business tax cuts are in their own best interest.

"It is naive to think that corporations pay taxes," Simon said. "It is people, ultimately, who pay taxes."

Simon said that recently reported sharp increases in corporate profits were "an optical illusion caused by inflation," as well as a result of unrealistic accounting practices. Profits actually fell 50 per cent between 1965 and 1974, and business is badly in need of capital investment funds, he said.

Among the possible recommendations, Simon said, is "integration" of personal and corporate income taxes. In short, corporate profits would be taxed either to the corporation when they are made or to the stockholder when dividends are paid, but not both.

Integration, which in one form could mean the abolition of the corporate income tax, would cost an estimated $15 billion, Simon said, and therefore would have to be phased in.

Other possible alternatives listed by Simon:

—Reductions in the corporate tax rate.

—A lowering of capital gains taxes.

—Incentives for private savings, including liberalized limits on the amount of money individuals may place in tax-free individual retirement accounts.

Utilities are in a special predicament, Simon said, and are badly in need of additional tax incentives quickly.

He recommended that the investment tax credit be raised from 10 per cent to 12 per cent on all electric utility property except generating facilities fueled by petroleum products. This would place emphasis on coal and nuclear generating facilities.

Simon also asked that rapid five-year tax writeoffs be extended to the cost of converting petroleum-fueled generating plants to non-petroleum fuels, and that five-year amortization be extended for installation of pollution-control devices on pre-1969 plants.

Simon said the administration still supports tax reform measures written by the Ways and Means Committee last year but which never got to the House floor.

These include a limitation on artificial accounting losses and a tightening of the minimum tax on the wealthy who pay little or no taxes. He said he now felt that charitable contributions should not be included in calculating the minimum tax, however.

Investigators find Soviet base

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Members of a House delegation said Tuesday an on-the-scene inspection had verified Pentagon claims the Soviets are building their largest overseas naval facility in the East African nation of Somalia.

Rep. Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., chairman of the eight-man group that returned from Somalia late Monday, said they saw evidence of "the most comprehensive naval support facility available to the Soviets anywhere outside the Soviet homeland, including Cuba."

Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger told the Senate Armed Services Committee June 10 that the Russians had installed a missile-handling facility at Berbera, including sophisticated Styx antiship missiles.

Some members voiced suspicion that the Pentagon raised the Somalia issue to drum up support for its request for $15 million to improve the U.S. naval base at Diego Garcia in the Indian Ocean. The Senate is expected to vote on that request this month.

Stratton denied it was a Pentagon pressure tactic and said, "I've been talking about that Somali base for a year. It's there. It's very real."

Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Calif., said he was convinced "we're going to have to develop our base at Diego Garcia. We can't rely on Somalia for use of their ports."

The Somali government had invited congressmen to tour the nation after Schlesinger's report, but the host government failed to live up to its offer of complete freedom of inspection.

Stratton said his group was forbidden to take photographs in many areas of the Berbera site and was barred from inspecting a communications facility the Russians reportedly are constructing.

"The excuse was that it wasn't suitable," Stratton said.

Election disclosure bill dead

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Opposition from the AFL-CIO and House leaders has apparently killed a bill that would let unions and corporations contribute funds directly to candidates without disclosing the source of the money.

Republican and Democrat leaders said Tuesday they would ask the House to reject the bill when it comes up for a vote today. The measure was approved by the Senate last week by a 26-19 vote.

In a letter Tuesday to House members, AFL-CIO Vice President Michael Johnson blasted the legislation because it contained too many loopholes.

"Our reasons are not complicated," Johnson said. "We simply believe that the Watergate syndrome should be a thing of the past and not be permitted to thrive in Pennsylvania with legislative blessing."

Under current law, unions and corporations are forbidden to use their funds to contribute directly to political candidates. They must form committees that rely on voluntary contributions and the lists of donors are made public.

However, the bill passed by the Senate would do away with that requirement. Unions would be able to use their members' dues and corporations their profits to contribute directly to candidates. They would not be required to disclose the source of the money.

Paul Abrams, an aide to House Speaker Herbert Fineman, said Fineman considers the bill an "abomination."

"The language is much too loose from the reporting standpoint," said Minority Leader Robert Butler, R-Montgomery. "For instance, it appears to let public employees unions contribute directly. That could be dangerous."

The controversial bill originated in the House, but it was only a minor measure that changed the Election Code to let policemen in some counties patrol near polling places.

Ford may be unbeatable

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Barry M. Goldwater of Arizona, titular head of Republican conservatives, said Tuesday that President Ford may be unbeatable in his bid for the presidency by the end of the year.

Goldwater said that if the recession has bottomed out, unemployment is on the downgrade and Ford has "some luck" in foreign policy, the President "is going to be impossible to beat" for the GOP presidential nomination.

"And no Democrat is going to beat him either," Goldwater added.

Goldwater, the GOP's 1964 standard-bearer, said Ronald Reagan and any other potential challenger for the nomination now has to announce quickly and "get to work" or find out it's too late.

Sen. John G. Tower of Texas, another member of the party's conservative wing, told reporters, "I would say at the moment the President is in very good shape in the party and his position is continuing to improve."

Tower also said Reagan must make an early decision — by Labor Day — whether to challenge Ford but added he felt Reagan "would opt not" to make the race because of Ford's improving position.

In Los Angeles, Reagan's long-time secretary, Helene Von Damm, was authorized to say that the former California governor and potential conservative GOP candidate, had not reached a decision.

Could be 1 billion barrel bonanza

House votes to open oil fields

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House voted Tuesday to permit private development of the more than 1 billion barrels of oil in the Elk Hills, Calif., reserve naval oil field now held under federal protection.

The measure, passed on a 391-20 vote and sent to the Senate, would transfer control of the big Elk Hills reserve and two other smaller Naval reserves from the Navy Department to the Interior Department.

The two other reserves are Buena Vista, adjacent to Elk Hills, and Teapot Dome near Caspar, Wyo., the object of a Washington scandal in the 1920's.

In a related action, the Senate passed 91-0 and sent to the House a proposed Strategic Energy Reserve Act which would provide for storage of a 90-day, federally owned supply of oil for the nation to use in the event of another foreign oil boycott.

Under the House bill, the three naval reserves would after transfer to Interior be open to bids from private developers under controls intended to prevent monopolies by big oil firms.

The Teapot Dome reserve, nearly depleted now with about 51 million barrels of oil left, came into the nation's lexicon of political scandals during Warren G. Harding's administration when then Interior Secretary Albert B. Fall was convicted of taking bribes in exchange for leases he granted to oil companies to develop the reserve.

Since that time all three reserves were put under control of the Navy to insure that the armed forces had sufficient oil in times of emergency.

The House rejected an effort by its Armed Services Committee to confine the three reserves under naval control but provide that 300,000 barrels a day from Elk Hills would be developed to provide a military emergency reserve of processed fuels. It was defeated 305-102.

Backers said it would give the military its own fuel supplies, providing that much more for civilian use.

The bill also would provide for exploration only of the big "Pet 4" reserve on the north slope near Barrow, Alaska, with its estimated 10 billion to 33 billion barrels of oil. No sale of that oil, however, would be permitted, only exploration.

The measure would provide that all revenue from sale of oil rights in the three reserves go into a special fund to purchase sufficient oil to create a strategic reserve in the event of another Arab oil boycott.

The Senate's energy reserve act would create, over a seven year period, a reserve system capable of replacing energy imports for at least 90 days in the case of another oil embargo. The reserves would consist of crude oil stored in natural geologic formations, such as salt domes, in tanks, abandoned mines, or surplus tankers.

President Ford is expected to support the House bill to tap the naval oil reserves since it closely follows his administration's recommendations.

Experts estimated in testimony to the committee that production of up to 300,000 barrels of oil a day could be realized from the three reserves within six months.

U.S., Israel to discuss Mideast

By United Press International
Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger will meet in West Germany Saturday to discuss an interim peace pact between Israel and Egypt. It was announced Tuesday in Washington and Tel Aviv.

progress in achieving an interim peace accord with Egypt based on a further Israeli troop withdrawal in Sinai. The Israelis said, however, that full agreement on specific terms had not yet been reached.

Rabin flew to West Germany earlier in the day for a four-day official visit, the first by an Israeli prime minister. The announcements said

Rabin and Kissinger will meet "to continue discussions within the framework of the efforts to achieve peace in the Mideast." The two men met in Washington in mid-June following a widely publicized reassessment of U.S. policy in the region in the wake of the collapse in March of Kissinger's shuttle diplomacy in the Middle East.

The British Broadcasting Corp. had reported earlier that Israel and Egypt have already agreed on terms for an interim accord lasting about three years.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy, however, said in Cairo Egypt has not received any new proposals relayed by the United States and an Israeli foreign ministry spokesman in Tel Aviv said the BBC report was "incomplete both as a whole and in many of its specific details."

The Israeli spokesman, however, did report "certain progress" in clarifying central issues between the two countries.

Israeli Ambassador Simcha Dinitz returned to Washington from Jerusalem Monday with instructions from the cabinet to seek additional clarifications from Kissinger on where Egypt wants Israeli forces to make their second withdrawal in Sinai.

Dinitz met with Kissinger and later told the Israeli newspaper Ma'ariv:

"The more the picture gets clear it becomes apparent that the chances for a settlement with Egypt have improved."

Egypt insists on an Israeli pullback from the Milla and Gidi mountain passes and Israel equally insists on retaining at least a foothold on their eastern end to prevent an armored thrust through the passes to central Sinai and eastwards to Israel.

Eisenhower CIA involvement being studied

Committee seeks Nixon testimony

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There is "a very real probability" former President Richard M. Nixon will be summoned to testify about his knowledge of CIA activities as part of the Senate's investigation of intelligence operations, Sen. Frank Church said Tuesday.

Church said, referring to an intelligence operation drawn up by former White House aide Tom Huston which Nixon approved, then canceled before it began.

Nixon was an "action officer" while he was vice president during the planning of the Bay of Pigs operation against Cuba.

Church said, and the committee would want to question Nixon on the matter.

Church emphasized Nixon was not involved in allegations that the CIA plotted assassinations of foreign leaders, an area the committee is investigating intensively.

"I am unable to say at this point, I cannot say, Mr. Nixon could have any useful information on the assassination issue," Church said.

The committee met Tuesday afternoon in session to hear retired Maj. Gen. Edward G. Lansdale, an assistant to former Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara.

Lansdale was quoted last week as saying former Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy ordered him in 1962 to have the CIA work out plans for "getting rid of" Fidel Castro. Lansdale later said his remarks had been "distorted."

What's news

Soviet - U.S. grain deal speculated

LONDON — Two London Newspapers reported Tuesday that the Soviet Union has quietly chartered enough ships to carry up to four million tons of wheat to Russia from the United States and Canada. The reports appeared at the same time as the International Wheat Council, which has its headquarters in London, reported that the Soviet Union may have to import five million tons of wheat or more this year because of shortages. It blamed hot, dry weather in the Soviet Union for failures to meet production quotas and said the situation could be made more serious if wet weather later this summer disrupts harvesting.

N.H. senator debate continues

WASHINGTON — The Senate failed a fourth time Tuesday to halt debate on the New Hampshire senatorial election dispute, even after majority Democrats offered concessions to end the bitter eight-month-old controversy. Republicans rejected "on principle" the concessions offered by Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, calling them "a title page to a great tragedy," then went on to oppose cloture, which failed by three votes, 57 to 38. Democrats have pledged to call up additional cloture petitions until they are successful in halting debate. Republicans insist they will continue to talk until Democrats give in and declare the New Hampshire seat vacant.

Mayors back off position

BOSTON — Big city Democratic mayors Tuesday backed down from a potential battle with the White House over federal revenue sharing in their effort to get additional federal funds for the nation's larger and poorer cities. The Democratic leadership of the U.S. Conference of Mayors said it was more interested in immediate presidential approval of a $2 billion anti-recession program and a $2.5 billion public works program than making demands about the criteria for federal revenue sharing.

Thornburgh sworn in WASHINGTON — Richard L. Thornburgh pledged Tuesday to run the criminal division of the Justice Department in a way that will "renew and perpetuate the confidence of the American people." Thornburgh, the former U.S. Attorney for Western Pennsylvania, was sworn in on schedule by Attorney General Edward H. Levi. Thornburgh, who succeeds former Assistant Attorney General Henry E. Petersen, said he intended to run the criminal division in a way that will "renew and perpetuate the confidence of the American people."

$100,000 CIA payment disclosed

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency secretly paid almost $100,000 to the largest independent U.S. petroleum company, Ashland Oil, between 1968 and 1973, a special report revealed Tuesday. The report, compiled under a U.S. district court order won by the Securities and Exchange Commission in May, dealt with $15.9 million in Ashland funds that had not previously been accounted for. The report did not say what Ashland did with the $98,968 in cash and checks it received from the CIA. But it said the firm had no record to substantiate the total funds received from the CIA.

Agnew's son arrested

BALTIMORE — James R. 'Randy' Agnew, son of former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, was charged with trespassing after a young Baltimore couple allegedly caught him peeping through their bedroom window, police said Tuesday. Police said Timothy Frye caught Agnew, 28, peering through the bedroom window of Frye's ground floor north Baltimore apartment and captured him after a brief fistfight. The incident allegedly occurred early Monday, but was not made public until police released a copy of the report Tuesday. Agnew was released on his own recognizance pending trial July 30.

Portuguese commandos alerted

LISBON, Portugal — The Communist party Tuesday alerted its members against a possible attempt to oust Portuguese Prime Minister Vasco Goncalves, apparently locked in a high-level power struggle with government moderates. The intensification of the attacks against the prime minister, the rise of counter-revolutionary propaganda and agitation has created a tense and grave situation that the progressive forces have to meet head-on, the Communists said in a pre-dawn statement. The statement urged party adherents to maintain popular vigilance against attempts to oust Goncalves and other communists from the military government's coalition cabinet.

CCC revival proposed

WASHINGTON — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen suggested Tuesday the WPA and the CCC, depression-era agencies which helped relieve the sting of the 1930s for hundreds of thousands of Americans, be dusted off to fight the joblessness of the 1970s. In the face of remarks by President Ford that the last thing the economy needs is a return to the "leaf-raking" schemes of the 1930s, Bentsen said WPA and CCC could assume that half a generation of young people will not reach their mid-20s without ever holding a meaningful job.

Military changes pregnancy rule

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon has decided that pregnant servicewomen no longer will be forced out of the military, a spokesman said Tuesday.

The old pregnancy rule was laid down in a 1951 executive order which automatically discharged pregnant women — whether married or single — unless they could prove that remaining in the service would not result in the neglect of their children or military duties.

Now a spokesman said, "Women who get pregnant will be allowed to remain in the service." But he said they would be given discharges if they requested them.

The spokesman said the change was ordered by the civilian secretariat at the top of the Defense Department and will apply to all four services.

A Pentagon source indicated that under the old policy, pregnant servicewomen had been informally encouraged to get abortions.

Pregnancy has been a major issue. In the fiscal year that ended June 30, 3 per cent of all the women in the Army were discharged for getting pregnant and in the previous year 5 per cent of the force was discharged.

However, the Army said that almost 10 per cent of its enlisted women had minor children, indicating that the Army at least had been fairly liberal in granting waivers under the 1951 policy.

In the last few years the armed forces have been taking in many more women volunteers and about three years ago decided to allow them to hold all but combat jobs. The first women generals were named in 1970.

The Air Force, generally the most liberal of the services, changed its pregnancy rules last March, a spokesman said, and the other services are now rewriting their rules.

Scientists attempt to lasso lightning

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Scientists dropped millions of metal coated fibers over this launch site Tuesday in hopes of taming lightning that could threaten next week's U.S.-Soviet space rendezvous mission.

An Air Force F4 Phantom jet zoomed three times over the ocean side launch complex, dropping the fibers from 500 and 1,000 feet while technicians monitored the drop to determine whether it affected radar and other sensitive electronic scanning equipment. They reported it did not.

Weather scientists believe the four-inch-long aluminized fibers, which are thinner than human hair, can dissipate the buildup of electrical charges when dropped into cumulus clouds before they have a chance to develop into thunderheads.

Launch Director Walter J. Kapryan reported everything was moving smoothly toward Thursday's start of the preliminary countdown for the scheduled 3:50 p.m. EDT July 15 blastoff of Apollo astronauts Thomas P. Stafford, Donald K. "Deke" Slayton and Vance D. Brand.

They are due to rendezvous two days later over Europe with Russian cosmonauts Alexei A. Leonov and Valeri N. Kubasov. The Russians are to takeoff from their Central Asia cosmodrome at 8:20 a.m. EDT July 15.

Search for colonel continues

BEIRUT (UPI) — Police and Palestinian guerrilla agents worked against the clock Tuesday in the hunt for the American colonel whose kidnapers have threatened with death unless their ransom demands are met by today.

Premier Rashid Karami met with U.S. Ambassador G. McMurtrie Godley to review developments in the search for Col. Ernest R. Morgan and afterwards repeated the optimism he voiced on Monday.

"We have hopes of getting positive results soon," he told newsmen.

Palestinian and police sources close to the investigation said Monday night they had "good evidence" of where Morgan was and anticipated freeing him soon. "We are close and we are hopeful. The break could come at any time," a Palestinian source said.

But despite the optimism, there was no indication that investigators have come any closer to finding Morgan who disappeared more than a week ago. The U.S. Embassy refused to comment on the case, referring all questions to Washington.

There was no indication that the kidnapers have made any further contact with officials since Sunday, when they set a three-day deadline for meeting their demands in return for sparing the 43-year-old colonel's life.

Milk laws revisions proposed

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The chairman of the House Agriculture Committee Tuesday introduced major amendments to Pennsylvania's milk marketing law — including one that would strip the governor of his power to name members of the Milk Marketing Board.

Rep. Kent Shelhamer, D-Columbia, said his proposal would allow the legislature to appoint the three members of the board, which has been the target of criticism from both consumers and farmers for several years.

"The elected board section is pretty important," Shelhamer said. "Currently the board is supposed to be an arm of the legislature, but it's not really. They don't respond to us. Neither the farmers nor consumers are happy the way it is."

Fire kills eight in Oregon

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Fire set by an arsonist swept a rundown hotel in Portland's downtown skid road area Monday night, killing eight persons and injuring 26 in the worst fatal fire in the city's history.

Police arrested John A. Newvine, 62, who lived a block from the flame-swept Pomona Hotel, and charged him with homicide and arson.

Newvine was arrested soon after the fire was discovered shortly before midnight. Police Capt. Richard Walker said Newvine was "identified as having been at the scene as well as having purchased gasoline from a nearby service station."

Among the injured were four firemen who fought the four alarm blaze.

Starving Somalians moved from drought by Soviets

KURT WAARY, Somalia (UPI) — Soviet planes have begun the transfer of nearly 200,000 famine-stricken Somali nomads in what may be the biggest planned human resettlement in African history, relief officials said Tuesday.

The nomads have been living in 14 temporary camps opened in northern Somalia last autumn following a severe drought which virtually wiped out the nomads' herds of millions of camels, sheep, goats and cattle.

About 50,000 nomads have died in Somalia and neighboring Ethiopia since the drought struck.

Somali officials have embarked on a program to move most of the 230,000 persons in the camps to new areas, leaving about 30,000 who will be allowed to resume their nomadic way of life eventually.

In the last week alone, an armada of Soviet four-engined Antonov-12 cargo planes, sometimes making 24 flights a day from the packed earth runway here, have transferred 9,000 people to this dusty farming village in the Wabe-Shabbe delta 90 miles southwest of Mogadishu.

Another 12,000 nomads, hauling wooden frame mat huts, tea pots and air-sick goats, have been flown to other resettlement areas.

Western relief officials described the resettlement program, spearheaded by a $60 million Soviet rehabilitation loan, as possibly the biggest of its kind in Africa's history.

Ethiopia has plans for a similar resettlement project involving about 70,000 persons in camps there.

The latest Somali government figures show 17,678 persons have died in their camps alone and some officials estimate as many as 50,000 persons in both countries died in the last few months.

Mogadishu's "scientific socialist government" has now established three agricultural resettlement areas where 90,000 nomads will be introduced to an agrarian way of life.

An estimated 78,000 other nomads are being resettled in 15 northern coastal locations in a $38 million Soviet fishing training program.

Other nomads will be allowed to return to their traditional wandering desert life. Vast land areas will be allowed to recover after the drought.

Line dispute heats up in Paradise

By DEBORAH ENYEART
Pocono Record Reporter

SWIFTWATER — Some blood may be spilled before the boundary dispute between Paradise and Pocono Townships is settled.

Solicitor Richard E. Deetz warned Paradise Township Supervisors Monday that the dispute will escalate "out of control" if a decision must be made in the courts.

"You've got a tiger by the tail if this goes to court, you'll get cut and you'll bleed. There will be costs no one can afford," Deetz said.

He told the supervisors that supervisors and engineers from the two townships met at Mount Pocono on June 23 to try to determine the northwest corner.

Deetz reported he sent a letter to Pocono Township solicitor Dettelf Hansen requesting that the supervisors either accept the stone marker used by Hess Associates, suggest an-

Milford approves sewerage

MILFORD — Milford Borough Council has passed a resolution accepting the county sewerage facilities plan conducted by the engineering firm of Glace & Glace, Harrisburg.

The firm recently prepared a plan for the subdivisions of Pike County at the request of county commissioners.

In proposing acceptance of the county plan which stresses controlled on-site sewage disposal, Chairman Leith Hoffman noted that if the borough did not accept the county plan it would have to prepare its own study for submission to the Department of Environmental Resources (DER).

The council had delayed having a disposal plan prepared, pending the release of the county study.

The sanitation committee was requested to advertise for bids for a private carrier to haul borough garbage.

This action was recommended by the committee because of problems involved in conforming to DER regulations at the borough's landfill dump site. The site is also slated for acquisition by the federal government.

Deferred to committees for recommendations were a number of matters including a request for funds by the Milford Midget League to cover maintenance expenses at the ball field.

Committees will also review a bill for net cables on the tennis court, the purchase of trash receptacles, two surface water drainage problems and the use of a building on East Ann St. as a truck service garage.

In reply to a request by Louis Chol to convert an old building into a woodworking shop, George Aspinwall, chairman of the parks and zoning committee, stated that under ordinance 89 such a request could only be granted through action by the board of adjustment.

Chol's building is located in a residential area, but he would like to convert it into commercial use.

In his report, Mayor Russell Roberts proclaimed Sunday, July 13 as a day to honor POWs and MIAs. A tree planting ceremony will be held 3 p.m. Sunday in honor of Sgt. Edwin Jack Pearce of Milford, missing in Laos since March 1972. The ceremony will be held at the Milford Veteran's Home.

In other business, the council voted final approval of an ordinance amendment raising the fee for a sign permit from $1 to $10 and a fee for a building permit from $1 to $25.

Council also accepted the resignation of William Dowd as a member of the borough planning board.

James O. Colbert, who was appointed to fill the unexpired term of Thomas Stephenson, attended his first meeting and was named to Stephenson's committee assignments including chairmanship of the Law and Legislation Committee.

Colbert is a retired state trooper now serving as Pike County detective.

First set shuts out Mt. Airy

SWIFTWATER — There may be tennis for no one if there isn't parking for everyone at Mount Airy Lodge.

Paradise Township Supervisors tabled action Monday on a request from Mount Airy to build 35 new tennis courts when questions were raised concerning adequate parking.

The township planning and zoning commission had recommended that the supervisors grant approval to the project if no parking along the state road be strictly enforced.

A planning commission member told supervisors that no extra parking had been planned for the new courts which were intended for use only by Mount Airy guests.

She added that lodge officials have been trying to enforce the no parking signs along legislative route 45100 since the construction proposal was made in April.

The township ordinance requires that one parking space be provided for each guest room and that one space be available for every two employees.

Supervisor W. Jack Kalins said there was sufficient parking to meet the requirements, but township zoning officer George Brosius felt more parking should be added.

"The state signs are only as good as they're enforced. Somebody's going to get hurt and then it'll be too late," he said.

A resident said a lot of people using the Mount Airy parking facilities were not guests but were "people stopping and looking."

Brosius added he thought supervisors should consider forming a township police force to help enforce parking and other township problems.

"We don't have as many problems as Barrett or Mount Pocono. Are the small benefits we would get worth the cost of the police?" replied Kalins.

Voluntary action requested

Mt. Pocono okays sign clean-up

MOUNT POCONO — The council for the borough of Mount Pocono moved to have the local planning and zoning commission proceed with its sign project.

Col. Edward Holland, commission chairman, told council that commission members working in conjunction with the borough's beautification program had conducted a survey of signs on the borough.

Holland stated they are planning to enlist the cooperation of all sign owners to take down, of their own accord, any non-conforming signs that are detrimental to the appearance of the borough, clean up dilapidated signs, and comply with the borough's sign ordinance. In a 4-1 vote council moved to advertise bids for repairs to three streets not affected by the borough sewerage project.

Councilmen Earnest Gross, Charles Sandel, Al Ingetti, and Ronald Avis voted in favor; Paul DeSanto voted no. Councilman John Latzanich was not present.

Council also moved to approve the borough recreation committee's letter of intent to the Department of Community Affairs for application for funds to aid in the borough recreation program.

Community Affairs may fund up to 50 per cent of the borough's $18,000 recreation improvement project.

DeSanto noted that the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation had line Rte. 940 east of Rte. 611 in the borough a passing zone.

He said he felt this created a hazardous traffic condition and action should be taken.

Council moved to write PennDOT regarding the matter and at the same time request a survey be made of the traffic pattern at the Pocono Village Mall. Council will ask that consideration be given to adding another traffic lane in that area.

A representative from Blue Ridge Cable Television requested a franchise for service in the borough.

Bernard Pallo, council president, noted that the same request was made a year ago and council requested the company list interest residents.

Pallo said the board will review all pertinent information before rendering a decision.

O'Brien informed council that he would resign as solicitor of the borough's zoning hearing board as of the first of the year. He told members the Supreme Court had handed down a decision ruling that if boroughs are involved in appeals before the zoning hearing board, the same solicitor cannot serve.

Women clergy spotlighted

HEMLOCK FARMS — The Hemlock Farms Interfaith Council will present a panel discussion on women in the clergy at 7:30 p.m. on Sunday, July 13 at the Steer Barn.

The panel will consist of representatives of the three major faiths who will discuss the controversy about the role of women in religion.

The panel will include Rabbi Robert Schreiber, regional director of the Metropolitan Council of the American Hebrew Congregation.

The audience is invited to contribute to the discussion.

Supervisors approve Hemlock additions

LORDS VALLEY — After nearly five months of delays, Blooming Grove Supervisors have approved two subdivisions on a 45-acre tract in Hemlock Farms.

Residents had opposed the subdivisions on the basis of over-population and lack of recreation facilities.

Township planners had approved the two subdivisions, section 15 and 15-A, last month subject to a bond arrangement between the developer, Home Smith International, and the supervisors.

According to Joseph Mazieka, project director for the developer, a $75,000 security bond was presented to supervisors Monday to cover construction costs for the subdivisions.

He said construction in the subdivisions would begin this week, but could not give a target date when work would be completed.

Mazieka had outlined a cost estimate of over $68,000 for drainage, road and grading improvement to the area that comprises the two subdivisions.

Vince Scamell, township solicitor, explained the bond will insure that the developer marks all lots and completes road construction.

There were no representatives from the Hemlock Farms Community Assn. at Monday's meeting in contrast to the large crowds who attended planning commission and supervisors' meetings several months ago, Scamell noted.

A third proposed subdivision, stage 102, was withdrawn by the developer as part of a proposed settlement of a lawsuit filed by the community association.

Residents had claimed that stage 102 was originally planned as a commercial area for the development. Home Smith had proposed to subdivide the 18-acre area into about 14 lots.

The township planning commission had approved all three proposed subdivisions, but had sent a letter to the supervisors asking them to consider the "public sentiment against the subdivision" before taking action.

Scamell said supervisors could find nothing legally wrong with the remaining two proposed subdivisions and approved them upon completion of the security bond.

In addition to residents opposing the subdivisions at past

Building permits required

POCONO PINES — Tobyhanna Township residents planning to construct, alter or remove buildings will be required to obtain a building permit.

The building permit ordinance which will become effective Monday, July 14, was adopted by supervisors at Monday's meeting.

The fee for a building permit will be $10 plus one dollar per $1,000 of construction costs. Also adopted was an encroachment ordinance which stipulates that a permit be obtained by all persons constructing access driveways on township roads.

The ordinance calls for a fee of $10 per access.

In other business supervisors accepted a bid of $201.01 from Darwin Keiper of Pocono Lake, for the purchase of the township's 1948 Mack fire truck. Keiper was the only bidder.

Atom's birth begot terror

On an overcast morning in the desert 30 years ago, the nuclear age was born. At approximately 5:30 a.m. on July 16, 1945, the world's first atomic device was exploded near Alamogordo, N.M. Those who observed the explosion from 10 to 20 miles away saw an unearthly light change from green to purple to orange while a great cloud rose and mushroomed out to a height of 40,000 feet.

All present were awe-struck. "It was as though the earth had opened and the skies had split," recalled New York Times science editor William Laurence — one of the few non-project workers allowed on the scene. "One felt one were present at the moment of creation when God said: 'Let there be light.'"

Destructive effects exceeded expectations. The explosion carved a hole in the earth 400 yards wide to a depth of 10 to 25 feet, vaporized the steel tower on which the bomb had been mounted 100 feet above the ground, and destroyed all animals and vegetation within one mile.

Three weeks later, on Aug. 6, 1945, the Air Force dropped a sister bomb on the Japanese city of Hiroshima, destroying or damaging nearly two-thirds of its buildings and killing or injuring possibly one-half of its 350,000 population. Another and even more destructive A-bomb was dropped over Nagasaki on Aug. 9. The next day Japan sued for peace and on Aug. 14 hostilities ended.

But the nightmarish problems of the nuclear age had barely begun. A controversy soon arose over whether the United States should proceed to develop the vastly more powerful hydrogen bomb, whose explosive force was released by the fusion of hydrogen atoms. Russia's detonation of an A-bomb, announced to the world by President Truman on Sept. 23, 1949, put an end to the debate. Truman directed the Atomic Energy Commission early in 1950 to work "on all forms of atomic weapons, including the so-called super-bomb."

The United States tested its first hydrogen bomb on Nov. 1, 1952, at Eniwetok in the Pacific. Only 10 months later, Aug. 20, 1953, Radio Moscow announced the explosion of Russia's first thermonuclear device. Over the next decade the two nuclear superpowers conducted many more tests in the atmosphere, leading to worldwide concern over the effects of radioactive fallout.

Concern about a possible U.S.-Soviet nuclear war is less now since the Nuclear Test Ban Treaty of 1963 and the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty of 1970. Instead, the main worry is that small, unstable countries or terrorist groups will get nuclear weapons and use them for blackmail.

And so the world will not rejoice on the 30th anniversary of that morning in Alamogordo. While most people have adapted to the "balance of terror," fear of a nuclear holocaust is never far from mind. It is a sad commentary on man's fate that the first practical product of so great a leap forward in knowledge as the discovery of atomic fission should have been a device to terrorize the world.

Unions better target

The federal government has proposed yet another minority employment plan that expands on the original, which was named the "Philadelphia Plan" after the city where it was first implemented.

The object is to force builders who win federal contracts to include a certain percentage of minority group workers in their force. The first plan did not work without some friction and objection, but eventually it did work.

Heartened, the federal government now wants to expand the minority condition to cover more types of work. The 1969 plan included only six trades. The proposed plan includes 23.

It seems to us the government is after the wrong people. Contractors, being hard-headed businessmen, don't care who does the work as long as its done. The culprits have been unions, which restrict membership in what usually turns out to be a discriminatory manner.

If the government forced unions to accept as members or apprentices, all who qualify (and the qualifications for most apprenticeships right now are political or personal) then minorities would have a good balance of representation.

Heavy penalties have been assessed against business for racial bias; we have yet to see the same standards applied to unions. It is about time they were.

July Fourth gasoline price hike only the beginning

WASHINGTON — The Fourth of July gas price increase is only the beginning — if the oil companies have their way.

With characteristic arrogance, several major oil companies raised gasoline prices last week just in time to soak the public at the start of the motoring season.

The price at the pump, accordingly, began to soar during the Fourth of July weekend. It may hit 90 cents a gallon by late fall, according to congressional experts, if President Ford has his way about decontrolling domestic oil prices.

The President hopes higher prices will hold down consumption and reduce U.S. dependence upon Arab oil. He, therefore, favors decontrol, which could occur on August 31 when the Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act expires.

Under the act, the price of "old" domestic oil is frozen at $5.25 per barrel. The price limitation doesn't apply to newly discovered oil. But since 40 per cent of the oil Americans consume is "old" domestic oil, the slightest price rise would register immediately at the gas pump.

If controls aren't extended, the domestic price undoubtedly would shoot up to the Arab price of about $12 per barrel. It could even go as high as $17.50 if the oil potentates carry out their threat to raise prices again this fall.

Decontrol would add a staggering $318 billion to the revenues of the oil companies during the next decade, according to a confidential

Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

House analysis. This would allow the producers to nearly double their already huge profits.

The analysis, prepared for Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., by the staff of his House Energy and Power subcommittee, is written in careful, scholarly language. When it is reduced to simple dollars and cents, however, it declares that the oil companies stand to reap great riches at the expense of their customers.

"The sub-section of the oil industry involved in the production of domestic crude," claims the study, "will experience a bonanza of new revenues. This great surge of new funds will be at the direct expense of the remainder of our commercial economy and the public."

The study cites these adverse economic effects:

— Higher oil prices will drain more money into the oil coffers, thus leaving less money for other public and private projects.

— Decontrol will cause "the further concentration of economic power in the oil industry," particularly "those involved in production."

— Higher prices will stimulate exploration for new oil, all right, as the President hopes. But production costs will also go into orbit because of "equipment and material shortages."

— Decontrol of domestic oil will only bolster the foreign oil cartel, since domestic producers "will be parallel beneficiaries of the foreign-dictated price."

Once domestic oil prices are taken out from under controls, the analysis warns, it will become "increasingly difficult to re-establish a reasonable new position on oil prices. Such a future revision would likely be characterized as a rollback by the oil industry and heavily lobbied."

The study, putting the great oil windfall in perspective, notes that "the profits of the international oil industry have been $60 billion over the four years from 1970 to 1974." Although some of this is returned to governments in taxes, the analysis points out that "oil producers' revenues are lightly taxed."

It should be added, in fairness, that the analysis presents the worst situation for the U.S. consumers. A compromise may yet be worked out in the decontrol battle. Congress and the President, meanwhile, are engaged in a $318 billion game of brinkmanship.

Washington Whirl: The Food and Drug Administration has given its blessings to a plastic disposable bottle which, if burned in a hot campfire or bunsen burner, emits hydrogen cyanide. This is the deadly poison used in gas chambers. The FDA says the gas, caused by incineration, is not their concern. "That's not what the bottles are intended for," said an FDA spokesman. "Our concern is if any plastic would get into the food" . . . The revolving door between industry and government never seems to stop turning. Robert Sheffield, who is in charge of products surveillance for the Food and Drug Administration, is moving to Sterling Drugs Corp., one of the firms whose drugs he is supposed to monitor. "I'm looking for more of a challenge," he told us . . .

The Senate committee, which is investigating the CIA and FBI, has quietly purchased five antibugging devices for its most sensitive telephones. The committee selected a $250 model — which, ironically, was designed by a former top CIA electronics expert — from Ashby and Associates of Washington . . . We recently reported that William "Fish Bait" Miller, the colorful former House doorkeeper, kept 2 dollars from each page as a "deposit" for their small green identification badges. After our story appeared, Miller paid a quiet visit to Capitol Hill to turn over $478 in cash to the House Clerk. This was the deposit money he had collected, he explained.

Can 38 senators be wrong?

WASHINGTON — If you were a member of the Senate would you even have to think twice before rejecting a treaty which would impose the following conditions on the United States?

1. — A foreign power would occupy a strip across the heartland of the nation, cutting the country in two.

2. — A foreign power would rule as sovereign over this occupied territory.

3. The foreign power would maintain within the United States a police force, courts and jails to enforce its laws on American citizens living or working within its jurisdiction.

4. — The foreign power would operate on American territory a full-fledged government which has no reference to its host, the United States.

5. — The foreign power would operate virtually all commercial enterprises within the area over which it has sovereignty and could deny to Americans the rights which would permit private American enterprise to compete with private foreign enterprise.

6. — The foreign power would control virtually all deepwater power facilities serving the United States.

7. — The foreign power would hold idle large areas of land and water within its area of control.

8. — The foreign power would pay the United States only $2.3 million annually for the immensely valuable rights it enjoys.

9. — Finally, the foreign power would have the right to do all these things "forever," since the treaty could only be ended by its initiative.

Confronted by conditions like these, the Senate's action would be certain. The Senate would reject such a treaty unanimously. If it failed to do so, the American people would rise up in protest and dispose of that particular Senate as rapidly as possible.

I am presenting no theoretical case. These are the exact conditions which the United States imposed on Panama to protect the Panama Canal. Theodore Roosevelt was President at the time and his motto was: "Speak softly and carry a big stick." In order to acquire these "rights" he relied on the "big stick" and there was no speaking softly.

Panamanians have risen up in protest during which 21 Panamanians were killed, and three Presidents — Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford — have been supporting negotiations to relieve these intolerably outdated, outmoded conditions and at the same time protect the operation and defense of the canal.

We know that no Senate would accept such conditions within the United States. But, believe it or not, 38 senators have already organized themselves into a task force intent upon making sure that the United States continues to impose these conditions on Panama.

Before the negotiations have been completed, these senators oppose any new treaty before its text has even been presented to them.

The ablest and most respected senior diplomat in the U.S. Foreign Service, Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker, conducted these negotiations.

"The new treaty," he affirms, "would grant us continued rights which we need to operate and defend the canal, and we would relinquish some rights which we don't need."

Will the senators who say no to this be willing to enlist to fight a war to force the Panamanians to continue a treaty we would never accept ourselves?

Pollution placing mankind in an unhealthy light?

Nicholas Von Hoffman

penetrate our gaseous envelope to touch all living things.

It was while photographing the birth and growth of a pumpkin for Walt Disney that something happened which got Ott thinking. He stumbled onto the fact that pumpkin vines grown under one kind of light produced only boy flowers, and vines grown under another kind of light produced only girl flowers. Other experiments with ultraviolet and infrared light permitted Ott to establish a link between light and reproduction in animals. He was able to show, for instance, that you can control the gender of baby chinchillas in a similar manner.

He has also been able to make a connection between the quality of light and health. The tails of Ott's experimental rats fell off after living 12 hours a day for six months under pink fluorescent illumination. The rats in his control group, living under conditions of normal sunlight, kept their fine, long-ugly, ratty tails. In another study he and his associates concluded that the six-year molar of several groups of children who had been kept in school rooms with below normal ultraviolet light showed a higher incidence of tooth decay than those whose classrooms were lit by a full-range light source.

His microscopic time-lapse photography suggests that the kind, power, duration and patterning of light may also affect the cell life of both animals and vegetables. Of course, when he uses the word light he's referring to more than the energy we can see. He means all radiation, not just that in the visible spectrum.

To make the point, he describes how you can take a night-blooming plant and put it in a dark closet, or one where the light is kept on, and it will not disturb the plant's biological clock or circadian rhythm. The plant will continue to bloom when it is night outside and go to sleep in the daytime. The same thing will happen if you put it in a cement cellar; but take it down to the bottom of a coal mine and the poor thing goes completely to pieces. Ott hypothesizes from this that the plant's cycle is controlled by minuscule or "trace" radiation from the sun which can penetrate closets and cellars but not 650 feet of earth and rock.

Do you want to change?

"Life on earth," he writes (in "Health and Light," the Devin-Adair Company, Old Greenwich, Conn., 1973), "has evolved under the balance of short wavelength ultraviolet comparable to the very low levels of general background radiation and much higher intensities of long wavelength ultraviolet comparable to that of visible outdoor natural sunlight." Whether or not this specific formulation is correct, life has indisputably arisen with certain radiation givens, so that if we change them it stands to reason we risk changing ourselves, and not necessarily in ways that will please us.

Even without aerosol cans, we've been changing the radiation environment, which it is reasonable to suppose we've adapted to by natural selection over the last few million years. We live under glass much of the time, and Ott tells us that even untinted glass filters out a high percentage of ultraviolet. In this respect he is very suspicious about what eye glasses may do because of the evidence he has collected suggesting ultraviolet stimulation of the retina may be part of the healthy functioning of the endocrine system.

Ott himself is one of those uncredentialed, self-taught geniuses. His ideas are not accepted by most scientists; only a few have looked at them. He doesn't claim they are proven, but right or wrong they tend in the direction about which much evidence is piling up, and that is life is not so tough or endlessly adaptive as is supposed.

'WIC': Best bet for good nutrition when it counts

Sylvia Porter

Foundation puts it: "Unless the pregnant woman and small child are properly fed, all the other feeding programs come too late."

"WIC" — standing for Special Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants, and Children — is our biggest nationwide prenatal and early childhood feeding as well as the most imaginative and "cost effective" of today's feeding programs. Under WIC, the Department of Agriculture pays health agencies and clinics to give nutritious, high-protein foods to low-income young children and women who are pregnant or nursing their babies. The foods are delivered directly to the home by the milkman or through some similar delivery system, or via vouchers which may be used to buy the special foods at grocery stores.

Here are key facts behind WIC — enacted into law back in 1972 but only recently getting into gear across the U.S.:

— The program has enormous potential for preventing the consequences of early nutritional gaps. Just in dollar terms alone, a 1968 Budget Bureau report estimated that the elimination of poverty-related hunger and malnutrition in the U.S., would bring a threefold return on the taxpayers' investment. An investment of $1 billion now would bring back $3 billion eventually — in the form of increased taxes from more productive people and enterprises. And that's not counting the human benefits of improved only about 400,000 people, or a tiny 8.6 per cent of the 4,600,000 mothers and children estimated to be eligible. Moreover, it is authorized by Congress to reach a maximum of only 12 per cent of those eligible.

Top administrators have been throwing up a bureaucratic obstacle course to slow the WIC program's implementation. The New York-based Food Research and Action Center actually had to fight for a year and a half through the courts to get the program launched. Implementation is still chaotic.

As one indication of the disorganization, the only agency a family seeking WIC benefits usually can contact successfully for information is the state health department and/or its local agencies. And then the crucial point would be whether the agencies know that benefits are available. The Children's Foundation also keeps tabs on what WIC operations are operating where.

For free information, write the Children's Foundation, 1028 Connecticut Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

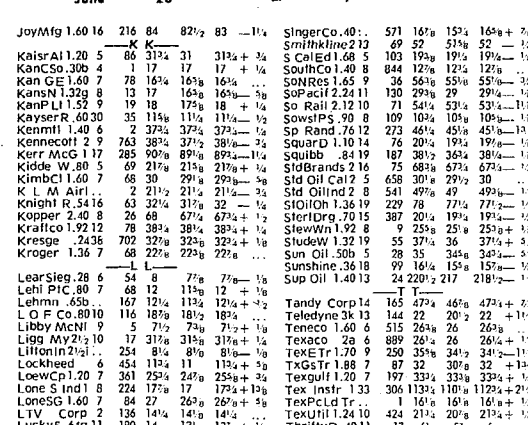

Now, as part of the conservative agenda he is preparing for the 1976 election campaign, President Ford is pushing to kill WIC altogether.

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — Leave the status quo in all phases of your life unless you are forced to make changes because of some unexpected developments. But, even then, act reservedly.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — Personal relationships highly congenial. In fact, your career status may be boosted by an influential person.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — Extravagance in general not recommended, but spending on business entertaining now justified if good will results.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — Don't let loyalty to an associate involve you in a dubious situation. It's a day for being strictly conventional.

LEO (July 24 to August 23) — The use of an old strategy or piece of advice may be your best stand-by now. Look out for things "offbeat" or out-of-context, however. They could mislead.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — Especially favored under propitious influences: research, scientific and technological experiments, outdoor interests.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — Job matters may require some special attention, perhaps a change of method. A state of readiness advised — to cope with the unexpected.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 23) — Unusual tact needed in domestic and social circles. Don't "make waves" or stir up needless dissension — only too easily done now if you are not alert.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — Aspects stimulate your knack for handling matters which involve many persons. Especially favored: legal matters, government work and meditation between opposing forces.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — Someone will throw down the gauntlet. The challenge will stimulate you and give you a bright idea — if you get busy at once.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — Be objective and watch for opportune moments to advance your interests. Combine your best ideas with those of others — for the benefit of all.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — Fine Neptune influences. Be on the lookout for good leads, projects with substantial background. Maritime interests, creative pursuits and travel especially favored.

YOU BORN TODAY are realistic, steadfast and extremely meticulous in handling details. Through your talents and personality, it seems as if you were made for service to mankind for, whatever you do, that will be the ultimate end. You may fulfill your mission through an important invention, through writing, lecturing or teaching.

Opening lead — king of hearts.

It is often difficult to achieve par on a deal, especially when the competition is fierce and the participants are all accomplished practitioners of the game.

But here is a case from a team match where each player gave his all and the par result was achieved with honor to both sides.

East's spade bid was normal and South, convinced that the opponents could make at least a game after his partner's pass, made a provocative overcall of four clubs.

This posed quite a problem for West, who had no fully satisfactory bid available at this point. West came forth with five hearts, which was probably the best he could do under the circumstances, and East raised the ante to six, despite the minimum nature of his opening bid.

West wisely converted this to six notrump — a spade lead by North would have defeated six hearts — and East-West thus achieved par on the deal by arriving at their best possible contract. They would have scored 1,440 points for making six notrump, had they been allowed to play that contract.

But at this point North upset the apperance when he entered the fray with his miserable hand by bidding seven clubs. Not many players would bid seven with North's hand, but subsequent events proved him right.

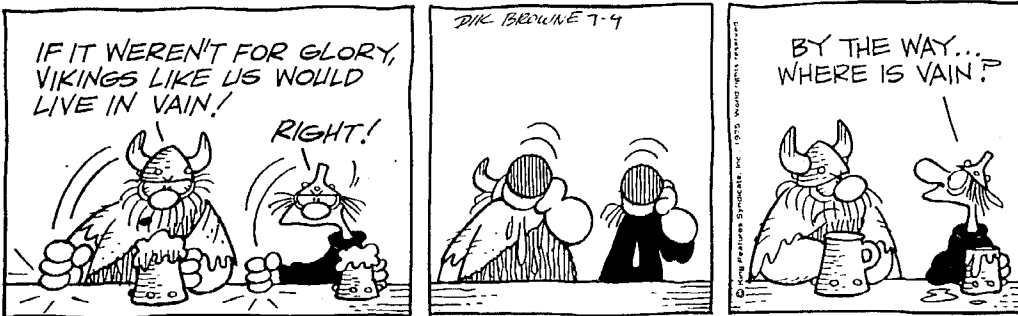

East doubled and South went down five, thus reducing a potential loss of 1,440 points to 900 and saving 540 points in the process. Sacrifice bids in either rubber bridge or team of four play are not exactly the greatest joy in the world, but they do cut your losses to more acceptable proportions.

Hooked parents

Dear Ann Landers: We keep hearing lectures and reading articles for parents who need to know how to help their children get off drugs. I have a different kind of question. What can children do to help parents who become addicted? I am not speaking about pot or LSD or heroin. I'm referring to a nice, respectable middle-aged couple in the suburbs who are hooked on barbiturates and amphetamines.

My mother and dad have a medicine chest full of Seconal, Tuinal, Nembutal, barbitol, phenobarbital and Eskatrol.

I'm sure they would be highly insulted if anyone suggested that they were drug addicts. When I told my mother amphetamines were "speed" she said, "Don't be silly."

My dad insists he can't get a night's sleep without pills. They both seem to think they are in no danger because the drugs are prescribed by our family doctor. What can I do to help them?

Concerned Son

should handle this problem — and I hope he does, promptly.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a friend (my age, early 60s) who is becoming very hard of hearing. He gets annoyed when he attends group meetings and can't hear the speaker. He has gone up to several speakers and told them they "mumble" and suggested that they take elocution lessons. Recently he complained to the custodian of the hall that the audio doesn't work and needs replacing.

It's always someone else's fault. Why can't he accept the fact that he is getting deaf? Should I recommend a hearing aid?

Sioux Falls Reader

Dear Sioux: Go ahead. But I'll bet anything he won't hear you.

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious — lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long-stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Buying happiness

There's an old chestnut going the rounds that money can't buy happiness.

The other night my husband was squinting over a book when he said, "How big is the lightbulb in this lamp?"

"I think it is 40 watts," I said.

"You have a bigger one in your sewing machine. How much would a 150-watt lightbulb cost?"

"About 89 cents."

He recorded 89 cents on a slip of paper. "And how about salt and pepper shakers for the table? I've heard of some families that have one set for the stove and one for the table. How much would an extra set cost?"

"You could get a little cheaper for a buck or so."

He scribbled down $1 and continued, "What are pencils selling for these days? The little wooden ones that you put by the phone and write down messages when someone calls?"

"I think pencils are still a dime or 15 cents. What are you doing?"

"I see. And what about a simple comb? One that I could have for my very own without hair in it that doesn't match mine. Are they out of sight?"

"A comb costs about 29 cents."

"Very good. Now, what about a whole newspaper?"

"A what?"

"A whole newspaper. One that hasn't been turned inside out, clipped, folded, bent, spindled, mutilated and littered all over the bathroom before I get to read it?"

"Fifteen cents," I said tiredly.

"Incredible!" he said touching a ballpoint pen to his tongue. "Are they still selling those little woven cushions for the car seat? The ones that are new and don't have the metal springs ripping into your leg everytime you slide into the seat?"

"Write down $3.98," I said. "Oh, and what about those little tables that some people put their forks and tongs on when they cook out of doors instead of using a garbage can lid?"

"They would run you about $5.95."

Busily, he tallied up the total. "Can you believe it? $12.41 would not only buy me happiness, it would buy me ecstasy!"

That's the recession for you. There was a time when $12.41 would have bought hysteria!

Campsite weight-watching

By BARBARA GIBBONS
If you're a campsite cook or galley gourmet, you know that "roughing it" is tough for calorie counters. Achieving balanced meals is difficult enough without refrigeration. Making do without excess calories is an almost-impossible challenge!
One food category that usually gets short shrift in the woods or on the water is vegetables.
So today we've come up with a trio of ice-bucket "salads to go" for the getaway Slim Gourmets. The idea is to make up these mixtures ahead of time at home. You can mix, pack, carry and serve them right in your insulated bucket. Each mixture includes one frozen ingredient, so that your mixture will have just the right chill by the evening meal. Cost of education rises more than cost of living

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Education Editor
On the average, serving up education in public schools last year cost $1,168.22 per student — some 211 per cent more than it cost in 1967.
Many states spent more. Many, less.
From 1967 to 1974, the Consumer Price Index shot up 57.2 per cent. If school costs had grown by that rate, the average cost of educating each public school student last year would only be $870.71.
A report on school spending — National Comparison: Local School Costs — shows that increases in fuel costs and raises for teachers were major factors in the annual education bill this past academic year.
For example, the per-student cost of heating buildings went up 49 per cent. The non-salary portion of the school bus bill went up 37 per cent. That is, the gasoline bill. All of this — plus a 14.1 per cent increase in teacher salaries.
The National Comparison of Public School Education Costs is conducted annually by Market Data Retrieval Inc., of Westport, Conn., in cooperation with Macmillan Professional magazines.
New York had the biggest school bills, putting out $1,887.02 or $718 per pupil more than the national average.
The survey also showed Illinois ranks second with an average of $1,624.56 per student.
On the low side, Arkansas spent the least of any school district nationwide — an average of $604.21 per student per year.

According to the new survey, 31 states spent over $1,000 for the total net cost of educating each child. A year ago only 21 states spent $1,000.
Grouped by regions, New York and New Jersey spent the highest for any area per student. This was $1,533.
Conversely, Region IV had the lowest per pupil cost — $851.18. States in this region include Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Texas.
What about the future?
Statisticians at the National Comparison survey center maintain the dramatic rise in educational expenditures in recent years "unquestionably mirrors society's concern for better education."
However, the statisticians are not at all certain that this concern will continue to be translated into additional dollars at the local level.

In many localities taxpayers want the line held.
Cuts in state aid to local school districts are being discussed as real possibilities in several states, and a growing number of districts "are having budgets rejected or are performing major surgery before submitting budgets for approval."

Classes scheduled

VNA seeks parents-to-be

STROUDSBURG — The Visiting Nurses Assn. (VNA) of Monroe County is looking for expectant parents to fill its parent-to-be classes.

The VNA sponsors a six-week course covering all aspects of birth for parents expecting children. The next course will begin July 24.
The classes are held from 7 to 9 p.m. each Thursday for six weeks at the General Hospital of Monroe County.
A registered nurse gives instruction in conception, pregnancy, delivery, post-partum care, and infant care. A physical therapist explains the use of exercise to ease delivery.
Any husband wishing to be in the delivery room while his wife is giving birth must take the course. The VNA reports that many husbands are asking to be present at delivery. A film of a delivery is shown so parents know what to expect.

Until now, the VNA sponsored the classes only three times a year. The association is now trying to continue the classes year-round; they will be testing demand with the new program.
The VNA needs eight couples registered to run a class. The upcoming class has been postponed from July 10 to round up the required couples.

Information on the classes may be obtained by calling the VAN at 421-2131 between 8:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. A nominal fee is charged for the six-week course.

Posten, a graduate of East Stroudsburg High School, and majored in music education at Lafayette College. He played in the Navy Band at Annapolis Naval Academy.
Posten and Cran organized the quintet while students at Annapolis.

Old-fashioned thrift

Don't send good money after bad breath

Americans spend hundreds of millions of dollars each year on mouthwashes. It's not surprising in our socially oriented, halitosis-hating culture. The facts show, however, that the effect of mouthwashes on bad breath is negligible. The FDA prohibits advertisers from claiming mouthwashes have therapeutic value, even regarding bad breath.

Save your money! Brush your teeth, rinse with water and leave the mouthwash on the shelf.

Pittsburgh station keeps Big Band music alive

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Big band music is alive and well at a suburban Pittsburgh FM radio station.

WNUF plays 15 hours of the music of the 1930s, the 1940s and 1950s each day.

"We're the only station in Pennsylvania that features the music of the Big Band era," said Doug Dasdorf, the station program director. "Two stations in Texas use the same format, but I don't know of any other station in the country that has such extensive programming of those years."

Two years ago a fire raged through the studios, destroying valuable vintage records.

"We lost most of our Red Nichols library, many of them dating to the 20s. One of our men had a private collection of great records and taped them for us. But we cannot use many of them because of the poor quality," Dasdorf said. "Many of the originals were scratched."

Dasdorf said the disc jockeys try to recreate the atmosphere of stage shows featuring big bands.

"You remember the format," he said. "After the feature movie, the band would play its theme song with the curtain still down. Then the curtain would rise to the applause of the audience. Usually the featured singer was next. Then came the band's biggest hit recording, highlighting the sidemen. Of course, there was the inevitable drum solo for about five minutes or so."

Sara Lockard, a winsome deejay, billed as "Sara in the Morning" receives dozens of requests daily by telephone and mail.

"I know many of the callers," she said. "They tell me their life stories. A widow frequently calls requesting tunes that were favorites of her husband. Several former servicemen, amputees as the result of combat, call frequently requesting the music of Tommy Dorsey, Benny Goodman, Glenn Miller and other bands of the bygone days.

"One woman requests song that she and her parakeet like."

Sara said she recently was a mistress of ceremonies at a record hop at a shopping center.

"A boy, about 20, requested a Glenn Miller record," she recalled. "At first I thought he was putting me on. But when I played the record, there was terrific response from the other youngsters. I came prepared to play mostly rock. But other kids asked for Dorsey favorites."

"Many asked for a specific number to be played at a certain time so they can tape them. I try to oblige."

The offerings of Artie Shaw, Harry James, Woody Herman contrast with requests for Guy Lombardo and Jan Garber.

"The most popular singers seem to be Frank Sinatra, Andy Williams, Perry Como, Bing Crosby, Helen O'Connell, Helen Forrest and, of course, Ella Fitzgerald," she said. "We get many requests for the records of Bob Eberly singing with Helen O'Connell with the Jimmy Dorsey band. The station receives requests for the songs of Harry Cool, featured with the Dick Jergens band." Few people remember Skinny Ennis, who sang with the Hal Kemp band.

"We have only one record featuring Skinnay — 'Got a Date With an Angel', Dasdorf said. "But we get many requests for it. The record can't be replaced."

"Says My Heart" is the only record of the late Ozzie Nelson in the WNUF library. The vocal was handled by Harriet Hilliard, who married Nelson.

With name like Porter, he should know his beer

By MICHAEL T. MALLOY

Dow Jones-Offset News

"All About Beer." By John Porter. Doubleday, 91 pages. $5.95.

SHEFFIELD, Mass. — "It was a rich, dark beer," recalls John Porter, lifting a glass beneath the hand-hewn beams of Scotty Burns' Stage Coach Hill Inn here. "It was so rich the froth on it was like devonshire cream."

A sometime author, brewmaster, pilot, teacher, sportscar racer, novelist, and cowboy, Porter was reminiscing about the best beer he ever had, a brew he says was bottled in a European convent and served to him long ago in a French restaurant in New York City.

Myself, I was on the next stool, having a half-pint of the Watneys' Red Barrel that Scotty keeps on tap and pumping Porter about beer. He has brewed, drunk, or admired beer for more than 30 years, and he just wrote a book called "All About Beer."

"Somehow the gas doesn't expand so much when it gets in your stomach," he says of this favorite old-world brews with their thick, lathered heads.

"The carbonic-acid gas is bound into the beer in very tiny bubbles during that long secondary fermentation. The all-American way is usually to squirt the carbonation in with the bottling machine, but then Americans are conditioned to very bubbly, burpy soft drinks anyway," he says.

At Porter's suggestion I switch for a while to Bass Ale, and Scotty brings a small dark bottle of it from behind his small dark bar. Why, I ask, is beer supposed to have a head?

"It's aesthetics, largely, but it also shows that the beer is beer," Porter says. "The things that make beer are things that produce a natural head. But the American way is to brew thin beer and put in what they call a 'foam stabilizing agent.' It's made from seaweed. Most American beer would be flat as water without a head stabilizer."

Beer is made out of water, yeast, hops, and malted (germinated) barley. The malted barley provides sugars on which the yeast, a living organism feeds. The papery cones of the hop vine give beer its bitter flavor. The fermentation process is a lavish banquet and orgy for the yeast creatures, whose rapid reproduction creates carbonating gas and alcohol as well as more yeast organisms.

"There was a workingman's meal," Porter says of the rich stew of protein and vitamins left by the yeast banquet. But most of us moderns don't like to see little things floating in the stuff we drink, and Americans especially prefer all their beverages to be as clear as water.

"In Europe it is not considered cricket to add caramel coloring to darken the beer," Porter says, "but that's the way we do it here, so we can have it both dark and clear at the same time. It's hard to make a light beer with malt, so we mix in a lot of rice and corn that the brewers like to call 'adjuncts.' They're cheaper."

Then, of course, it's filtered and fizzed and pasteurized to improve the beer's shelf life. Porter says Americans drink their beer icy-cold to kill the taste; Europeans drink theirs warmer to enhance it.

After his apprenticeship at a New York brewery, Porter went on to the United States Brewer's Academy, which is now, unfortunately, defunct.

"My graduation brew was a Porter, because of my name," he recalls. "Licorice, hops, dark malt, and regular brewers' yeast. Porter and Stout are "black" beers. The Stout gets its color from roasted dark malt, and the Porter from the licorice."

The ale I'm drinking, Porter tells me, gets its pleasant tart taste from top-fermentation yeast, which rises during fermentation. Most other brews are "lager," made from bottom, fermentation yeast, which, sure enough, sinks to the bottom instead.

There's a frothy brew of semantic confusion here. The British drink top fermented ale but call it beer instead. Bottom fermented lager can be anything from a dark and hearty Munich type of beer to a pale, light pilsner, the variety that has conquered most of the world.

Porter says pilsner originated from the town of Pilsen in Czechoslovakia where the best hops grow. Pilsner Urquell has been brewed there since at least 1295. "It's the champagne of beers," Porter says. "All others are 'Pilsner types.'" Even the Germans import a lot of Pilsner Urquell.

WE'RE CROWEING ABOUT OUR ACCOMPLISHMENTS IN LOWERING FIRE INSURANCE RATES FOR RETAILERS & RESTAURANT OWNERS!

Study our correspondence with the INSURANCE SERVICES OFFICE — The people who determine the fire insurance rates for the Pocono Mountain area.

On May 7, 1975, FIRE INSURANCE RATES For Buildings occupied by Retail Stores were INCREASED BY 47%. At this time we wrote letter No. 1 asking for proof of the need for a rate increase.

Our reply from the I.S.O. of Pa. was received on May 17, 1975. Dissatisfied with this reply — we decided to pursue the matter further. We simply refused to believe that a loss record of less than 50% for retailers and restaurants justified a rate increase of any amount let alone 47%!

After some additional investigation, we sent letter No. 3 on May 19, 1975. (Please note the second paragraph of our letter).

FINALLY!

On June 20, 1975, we received a reply with which we were satisfied. NOW — Let's look at what we've accomplished (Letter No. 4)

AN ULTIMATE SAVINGS OF 34% FOR RETAILERS & RESTAURANT OWNERS!

We at CROWE INSURANCE AGENCY are proud of what we've accomplished for retailers and restaurant owners!

If you'd like this kind of an insurance agent — one who is on your side all the time — Call us at 421-3535. Walter McClelland, Don Heim, Richard McClelland or Lawrence Schoenerberger will be glad to review your insurance problems.

Dear Mr. Shelley:

We have learned through one of our company fieldmen that the fire insurance rates for all classes in Pennsylvania have increased substantially.

I am surprised at the size of this increase because I do not recall many in the commercial fire category that are showing losses in the last ten years. Of course, we all know that Auto and General Liability classes have produced large losses.

I would appreciate receiving statistical data substantiating the rate increase for Zone 2 for Code 043 which are retail and mercantile risks, and 075, which are hotel risks, particularly.

Your cooperation in this area would be appreciated.

Dear Mr. McClelland:

Your letter dated May 9, 1975 to Mr. B. Joseph Shelley has been referred to me for reply.

The statistical information I have been able to pull out of the filing for Zone 2 for SCOR Code 043 is as follows:

SCOR Code 043	Rate Level Review Period 1967-1972	Proposed Increase
Zone 2	3,576,276	1,603,372

Distribution of Classification Indication to Zone

Loss Ratio	Indication	Proposed Adjustment
Zone 2 .455	+14.3	+68.7

The statistics for SCOR Code 075 are statewide statistics and it is impossible to breakout the statistics for any single zone.

I sincerely hope that the above information will be of some assistance to you.

In reply to your letter of May 15th, we wanted statistics for Code 043, which covers hotel risks, for Statewide; so I would appreciate your sending them.

Obviously I am not an actuary and so I would appreciate a little better explanation of why Code 043, which covers retail and mercantile risks, required the tremendous increase based on the premiums and losses you gave us.

Dear Mr. McClelland:

Reference is made to your correspondence dated May 19, 1975, relative to the adjustment for Code 075 and 043 in Zone No. 2.

Please be advised that the state wide experience for Code 075 Hotels, etc. is as follows:

Item	Amount
Earned Premiums	$8,384,902
Insured Losses	$2,969,154
Loss Ratio	35.2%

The above figures are actuarially correct for Code 075 Hotels, etc. Pennsylvania.

The presently published adjustment for Code 043 in Zone No. 2 is a 47% increase based on your letter we reviewed the adjustment for this code and determined that the present adjustment is an error. The proper adjustment should be a -20%. There are other corrections that we are making based on our review and comments of others such as yourself. We appreciate your calling this to our attention so that we may correct our annuals that are in the hands of the people who need them with this day after another.

In the near future:

Hope to prevent spread

Nuclear nations uneasy

By PHIL NEWSOM

UPI Foreign News Analyst
Spurred by the United States with the active help of Canada, nuclear exporting nations are making new attempts to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons while at the same time helping to make available to developing nations nuclear technology for peaceful purposes.

U.S. arms controls officials estimate that unless adequate controls are found some two dozen nations could acquire nuclear weapons within the next decade.

More than 80 countries have ratified or signed the 1968 treaty against proliferation of atomic weapons, but among those that have not, immediate capability is said to be possessed by Japan, West Germany, Argentina, Brazil, Pakistan and South Korea.

Japan is about to ratify the non-proliferation treaty and West Germany and other members of the European Atomic Energy community are adopting the safety standards of the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna.

In London, in mid-June, representatives of the United States, Britain, the Soviet Union, West Germany, France and Canada met to discuss possible means of controlling sales and developing new safeguards.

Lending urgency to their secret discussions were West Germany's agreement to sell a complete nuclear system to Brazil and French negotiations to sell to Argentina, Pakistan and South Korea nuclear fuel reprocessing plants that could be turned to making plutonium for weapons.

Brazil is said to have agreed to at least limited supervision of her nuclear program by the international agency and France also is said to be accompanying her sales with insistence on agency controls.

Canada, after considerable debate, has declared its intention to continue supplying nuclear reactors to developing states but will also press for more effective controls.

Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau has said that to withhold nuclear technology from needy nations would be irresponsible.

It was with use of material from a Canadian-supplied reactor that India was able to produce a nuclear explosion last year.

Under present controls, inspectors from the international agency are permitted to enter 88 countries to make sure no fissionable material is diverted to the secret manufacture of weapons.

Some of these countries permit inspection even though they are not signatories to the non-proliferation treaty.

Besides keeping track of fissionable material the agency helps developing nations in the application of atomic techniques to food, agriculture, biology and medicine.

Beyond the question of international controls, there also is the growing concern that outlaw or terrorist groups might steal enough plutonium to manufacture a crude bomb.

It only takes five kilograms of plutonium in a form suitable for explosives to make a bomb capable of destroying a medium-sized city.

The committee hired David Sharpe of East Stroudsburg to run the school's new program for 40 educationally mentally retarded students.

Members also located the program; between the Vo-Tech school's library and cafeteria. When the proposed $1 million addition to the school is completed, the class will move to the health assistance suite.

Erosion planning important

Swash can buckle your home

By DEBORAH ENYEART
Pocono Record Reporter
STROUDSBURG — There's a lot more involved in buying land and building a home than liking the location and approving the architect's plans.

Careful environmental planning before construction begins can prevent costly repairs and save the owner from becoming a bad neighbor before he even moves in.

Lowell "Skip" Edminster of the U.S. Soil Conservation Service said surface water, drainage and erosion can cause problems for both the builder and his neighbors if proper controls aren't practiced during construction.

Without controls, soil can wash from a construction site during a rainstorm and clog streams, fill lakes and damage neighboring property.

Dust during dry periods can be annoying to neighbors while other practices can harm nature and forests.

Edminster said these problems can be avoided by using debris basins to catch sediment and diversion channels to catch runoff.

The problems have been relieved a little by the Clean Stream Act which requires contractors to have erosion and sediment control plans for "earth-disturbing" activities.

Also, the act requires contractors to have a permit if the project involves clearing over 25 acres.

"This has forced planners, developers and contractors to stage work so that it's under permit requirements. The permit means more supervision," Edminster said.

The control plan requires the builder to state what control devices will be used and also to submit a timetable of construction plans.

Edminster said the first goal is to prevent surface water by exposing as little soil as possible.

Next, contractors are urged to protect off-site areas with collection devices such as debris basins or a grass "filtering" strip such as farmers use between rows of crops.

Debris basins are ponds which hold water temporarily until it drains out through a perforated pipe after dropping most sediment.

In addition to protecting the area during construction, environmental control devices can prevent later expensive repairs for the owner.

"If an owner knew his site had a high water table or a seasonal high water table, he could put tile around the footer to prevent a wet basement," he explained.

"It's very difficult to cure that problem after the house is built," Edminster added.

He said the owner would then either have to backhoe a trench around the house and risk cracking the foundation or dig the trench by hand and risk its collapse.

"Some people like to tuck their houses right next to the woods. There's great deal of water running off the steep hillsides," he said.

Homeowners can avoid this problem by digging diversions and grading to carry water away from the house.

Edminster said a conservative estimate of property damages would be in the hundreds of thousands of dollars a year in this area.

"We get complaints every week of muddy water running across yards or something like that. Often people just grin and bear it," he said.

He added that the federal agency doesn't handle complaints and refers them to the Monroe County Conservation District.

Edminster suggested that prospective land customers check with his office before buying to determine what kind of soil the land has and what environmental problems they might have with it.

"One couple came in here after spending $24,000 for a piece of lakefront property, just the property. The lake wasn't even there yet," he said.

"After purchasing the property they came in to see if the soil would support a sewage system. You'd think anyone spending that kind of money would check on the soil first," he continued.

The federal agency will advise contractors, planners and individuals about soil conditions and suggest environmental controls.

A limited number of federal publications describing various drainage and erosion control methods are available at the agency office, 2115 N. Fifth St.

Conservationist urges land plan

STROUDSBURG — A lack of long-term land use planning may be the biggest single problem in environmental construction problems.

County lands possibly are being used in a way that doesn't utilize their full resource potential, according to Lowell Edminster of the U.S. Soil Conservation Service.

He said planners should presuppose that building will continue in the county as large parts of the county are being subdivided.

What used to be farm land is now being subdivided into developments which "may not be the best long term objective for the land."

Edminster said some kind of long-term land use planning is needed to assure that land is being used to its fullest potential.

"The local municipalities are the most powerful group in zoning. The state was taking an interest in forming a land use policy. A federal program never got off the ground," he said.

"You can subdivide any area in the county you want to. There are very few things to stop someone from developing an area unless it's a real hazardous area," he continued.

"Land rights are kind of a sacred thing. It's felt you can do anything you want on your land and not give a care about your neighbors. Now that's changing," Edminster said.

He's also upset that taxpayers' dollars are being used to correct problems caused by private landowners who didn't use environmental controls to prevent surface water and erosion during construction.

Edminster claimed that when he came to the area three years ago, a county developer cleared land using methods which caused roads and culverts to be washed out during a heavy storm.

Municipalities that decided to buy federal flood insurance are required to have flood zoning, he added.

"The township didn't go after the developer. Instead, the township replaced the roads and culverts at the taxpayers' expense," he said.

Downtown piling up

Portland seeks parking lot

PORTLAND — Portland Borough Council would like to see parked cars off the borough's Main Street and into a municipal parking lot where some residents feel they belong.

The borough currently has a two-hour time limit for 29 parking spaces on the Main Street, but Police Chief John O'Hagen reports most cars stay on the street much longer.

"People remove their cars a minute before the two hours are up and then return and park in the same space," O'Hagen noted.

"These people monopolize the spaces and their technically not in violation of the law." William Golden, a resident of the borough, said there were six cars that remained in front of his store all day in violation of the borough law.

"It just seems as soon as I appear the cars are moved," O'Hagen said.

Mayor Russell Snyder termed downtown parking a "bad situation" and said the borough might have to hire more part-time policemen to enforce the parking law.

However, Councilman Dave Dahlman noted, "how are we going to hire more policemen with a limited budget."

Golden pointed out that the business district was slowly changing as more businesses were becoming apartments and residents were parking cars in front of their homes.

"I think you have to figure out a way to get more parking spots," he said.

It was suggested that property owned by Dahlman be converted into a municipal parking lot to ease the parking situation.

A committee comprised of Dahlman, the mayor, O'Hagen, Neil Brodt and Lewis Judy will investigate using a part of Dahlman's property as a municipal parking lot for a nominal or fair fee.

Councilmen said they also intend to eliminate two parking spaces on the Main Street that are within 15 feet of an intersection. The parking spaces are in violation of state laws.

Charges include assault, theft

Juvenile court hears eight

STROUDSBURG — A 16-year-old East Stroudsburg youth accused of taking a car without the owner's permission was one of eight cases handled Tuesday in Monroe County Juvenile Court.

The owner of the car testified that the youth had asked her if he could borrow her car and she said no. She said she had previously allowed him to drive her car, including earlier on the night in question, June 5.

She testified the youth removed the car key from her pocketbook and took the car. The youth admitted he was denied permission to drive the car and said he took it about three hours later to drive a friend home. The car went into a ditch, he said.

President Judge Arlington W. Williams said due to the youth's own testimony of taking the car without permission, there was no other choice but to find him delinquent.

Williams placed the youth on probation for an indefinite period.

In other juvenile matters, a 17-year-old Pocono Pines youth admitted taking $3,463 from his grandparents between Jan. 1 and May 1.

Judge Williams accepted a consent decree saying since the arrangement was agreeable to the grandparents, it was agreeable to the court.

The youth was placed on probation for six months and directed to keep a regular job, do household chores, obey a 9 p.m. curfew unless out with a parent or guardian, not to associate with certain people, and make restitution.

In another case, a 15-year-old Stroudsburg youth was placed on probation and ordered to make restitution after admitting delinquent acts which, if in adult court, would constitute burglary, theft and conspiracy.

Judge Williams commended the youth on his truthfulness relating to the incidents. The judge said the youth's attitude was evidence that he was remorseful.

The youth was apprehended in connection with a burglary at the Sears warehouse and the theft of two citizen band radios in Upper Mount Bethel and two more in Stroudsburg.

A 16-year-old Stroudsburg youth was placed on probation for making a bomb threat at Stroudsburg High School. Judge Williams told the youth it was a very serious action and that a similar bomb threat on one occasion cost the school district $7,500.

A 16-year-old East Stroudsburg boy entered a consent decree to a charge of possession of marijuana and was placed on probation for six months on the conditions that he continue employment this summer, attend school regularly when it resumes, observe a 9 p.m. curfew, do household chores and does not associate with certain persons.

A charge of possession of alcoholic beverages was dismissed.

In connection with the same incident, a 17-year-old East Stroudsburg boy had charges of possession of a controlled substance and possession of alcoholic beverages dismissed, the first due to insufficient evidence and the latter because it is not a juvenile court matter.

Both youths were charged in connection with a May 25 incident when they were found in a car parked along Rte. 80 at 4 a.m.

In other matters, a 17-year-old boy was ordered to pay $47 in medical bills and report periodically to the probation office on a charge of simple assault, and the theft case of a 15-year-old Stroudsburg youth was referred to the probation department for settlement.

Eastburg planners ratify Crystal Street project

EAST STROUDSBURG — Tentative plans for the Crystal Street Center were recommended for approval by the East Stroudsburg Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday.

The plans were devised by Mullin and Loneragan Associates, Inc., as part of the borough's Community Development program. In the first-year phase, plans call for the creation of a shopping mall between Crystal Street and South Courtland Street.

Several properties would be acquired by the borough so additional off-street parking could be provided. Landscaping would be done on open space.

Board member Dr. William Hein said the first phase of the plan emphasizes beautification and encouraging shoppers to use existing businesses. Future phases would try to increase the number of businesses in the area.

In other business, the board postponed action on a request for a special use variance from the George N. Kemp American Legion Post to build a social hall behind Chestnut Street and Fourth and Fifth Streets, a residential zone.

Legion representatives did not have up-to-date plans available for the board to review. The board decided to ask the Zoning Hearing Board to keep its record open so its recommendation could be added after other testimony is taken at the formal hearing.

The board voted to recommend the rejection of a variance request by Prudential Insurance Co. to erect an illuminated sign facing Interstate 80 and two metal plaques on a building at 401 Prospect St.

Prudential Insurance Co. is renting space at the building from Edwin Krawitz. The building is occupied by Pocono Realty.

The proposed signs would have exceeded maximum sign sizes and the maximum number of signs allowed at a building.

The board recessed the meeting briefly for an on-site inspection of Hughes Printing Co., N. Crystal Street.

Paul J. Dellaria, assistant to the president, explained the company's problem with potted trees placed at insets in the brick walls of the building. He said debris is thrown into the pots and insets, the trees do not get enough sunlight to grow and when it rains, water pours in through the windows.

The board recommended approval of the following:

— Two variances for the East Stroudsburg School District; one for an athletic field and the other to build a bus maintenance garage on the Junior-Senior High School premises.

— A special use variance for a group residence at 285 Prospect St. owned by Irvin T. Burch of Wilkes-Barre.

— An 88-square-foot expansion for a dental office in what was formerly the kitchen area of the home of Dr. Martin Alfano, 120 Ridgeway St.

Mrs. Eugenia Eden was elected chairman of the board. James Hanscome was re-elected vice chairman.

New Beginnings takes on a fresh face in a former hotel and camp near Echo Lake

New beginning, again

Halfway house grows, moves

By DEBORAH ENYEART
Pocono Record Reporter
ECHO LAKE — New is the key word at the New Beginnings Halfway House.

The program recently moved to a new location with plenty of room for expansion and received new officers on its board of directors.

The new home for the program is located on 38 acres of land in the Echo Lake area off Route 209 on property owned by the Rev. John Thomas of Camden, N.J.

Program director Jerry Devlin said the house has 11 private rooms for 22 men, a big living room, a dining room, kitchen and pantry.

"It's huge compared to what we had at the old place," Devlin said, adding there is also a lake on the property.

The structure had been a hotel years ago and then became Eagle Mountain Camp, which Thomas rented as a children's camp.

The halfway house moved from its former location on Route 611 near Bartonsville because the converted church was too small and needed $20,000 worth of repairs to meet Department of Environmental Resources standards.

Devlin explained the program's directors were told to either make the repairs or find a new place by the first of July or risk losing state funds.

He said that they were lucky to find this location which was offered at the same rent they had been paying and that their former landlord released them from their lease a year early.

"What has me tickled pink about this place is the room that's available for future expansion of the program," Devlin said.

Presently 19 men are involved in the program, which Devlin said is one of the most successful halfway house programs in the state.

"The program is being talked about all over the state," Devlin said.

He attributed the program's success both to the program itself and to the staff, who are all recovered alcoholics.

Devlin admitted some men fail in the program but most "are leaving sober and much more motivated."

He added that the men moved everything to the new location in one day, although he had rented equipment for three days for the job.

The halfway house board of directors also received some new officers. Dr. Robert M. Porter was elected president and Mrs. Michael Miller was elected vice president.

Howdy Doody's Clarabell takes clowning seriously

EAST STROUDSBURG — Eddie Alberian stands in a ward of the General Hospital of Monroe County dressed in a satin yellow bag dotted with red and white bull's eyes, twisting balloons into dogs and swans.

Smiling through a coat of rouge and white make-up, the 50-year-old clown who has played Bozo and Clarabell on the Howdy Doody show adds a curving green neck and head to the blue balloon body of a swan.

"What is it?" he asks the three youngsters in the ward in a half-singing voice.

"A duck," says five-year-old Amy Geiser.

"Yeh," he says, drawing out the sound, "but it starts with an 'S.' What else swims in the water?"

"A fish," Amy says quickly.

The wide face and soft brown eyes behind the crinkled make-up should be familiar to those who grew up with Bob Smith and the Howdy Doody show.

Alberian joined the crew as Clarabell the clown in 1950 after stints as a pre-med student, opera singer and actor on Broadway.

"When I was a kid, I used to study music," he says. "There was something in music I was going after, but I didn't know what it was."

"It was singing. But I always had comedy. Everything I've done has been geared toward comedy."

When Howdy Doody folded, he played Bozo the clown on WPIX television, and now entertains children in shopping centers across the country.

Sometimes he takes the Walt Disney characters Mickey Mouse, Pluto and Donald Duck along for the shows at 40 Jamesway stores in five states.

Between acts, Alberian visits children in nearby hospitals. "If I was a kid in the hospital, I sure would like to see a clown come and make me happy," he says in the hospital lobby after being assured he had visited all the children in the pediatrics ward. He had even stopped to wave at a small girl who sat behind the glass in the ward's isolation unit.

Married with a son, 14, and a daughter, 11, in Weehawken, N.J., Alberian takes his clowning seriously. "It takes me one hour to put this make-up on. This suit costs a thousand bucks. If I didn't love what I'm doing now, you'd never catch me doing it."

"Anything else?" he asks and walks out the door to a pickup truck, waiting to take him to a show at the Jamesway in Stroud Township Tuesday night.

As he rounds the pickup, he passes a group of adults sitting on benches.

"Hello there. How are you?" he says in the same half-singing voice he used with the children minutes ago.

Stroud anxious for sewer plan

STROUDSBURG — If a firm plan on the sewerage of eastern Monroe County cannot be reached "in a reasonable length of time," Stroud Township will be forced to construct its own collection system and treatment plant.

In a letter to the Monroe County General Authority, the three Stroud supervisors said if it becomes impossible for a final agreement to be reached, Stroud Township "because of the critical need for sewage facilities would, by necessity, pursue the possibility of applying for the necessary funding to construct its own collecting system and treatment plant."

William R. Crooks Jr., supervisor chairman, said he did not know how long the supervisors would wait before pursuing funding on their own.

Crooks said if some of the communities presently included in the plan don't want to be involved, the remaining municipalities would put in their own system and "still should be eligible for the 75 or 80 per cent funding" currently offered through state and federal agencies.

James E. Cadue Jr., executive director of the general authority said the project engineers will either recommend one of 11 alternatives or choose two or three and have the municipalities meet to come up with one satisfactory proposal.

The letter from the supervisors will be entered as a part of the official record of a June 19 public hearing on the proposed $7 million project for the boroughs of Stroudsburg, East Stroudsburg and Delaware Water Gap and the townships of Stroud, Smithfield and Middle Smithfield.

The supervisors also suggested that a weighted average be used in evaluating the alternatives rather than an equal basis on four major aspects.

The supervisors proposed a weighted average of: cost per residence at 65 per cent; cost effectiveness at 15 per cent; environmental aspects at 10 per cent; and implementability at 10 per cent.

"We feel this would give a more equitable measurement of the overall summary," the letter stated.

The supervisors also told the authority that if a cost equity system is used to determine costs per household, Stroud Township would favor the alternative calling for an upgrading of the existing Stroudsburg treatment plant, an upgrading

Rape charged

MILFORD — A Canadensis man, who allegedly raped a 19-year-old Pike County girl, turned himself in to state police at Milford Tuesday.

Ernest LaBar, 21, was arraigned before District Magistrate George Hattley on charges of rape, assault and involuntary deviate sexual intercourse.

He was committed to Pike County Jail in lieu of $15,000 bail with a preliminary hearing set for 1 p.m. Friday, July 18.

Police said charges against LaBar stem from an incident that occurred July 3 on Lake Russell Road, Greene Township.

Driver court bound

STROUDSBURG — Claude Vannostrand, 70, of Stroudsburg R.D. 5 was bound over grand jury action Monday on a charge of driving under the influence of alcohol.

After a preliminary hearing, District Magistrate Graden Praetorius said Vannostrand was released on his own recognizance.

Auto vandalized

STROUDSBURG — Vandalism stole a left front wheel, tire and backrest Monday from a car owned by Mrs. Viola Hartman, 62, Stroudsburg R.D. 2.

The incident occurred when Mrs. Hartman's car was parked in her driveway. The stolen items were worth $60, police said.

Drunken driving charged

STROUDSBURG — A Stroudsburg man was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol Monday after a three-car crash near 6th and Main Streets, Stroudsburg.

Woodrow Heller, 62, of 25 N. 10th St. was arraigned before District Magistrate Earl Ammerman and released on $300 bail. Police said Heller's car stopped on Main Street and was hit in the back by an auto driven by Lloyd Doll, 69, of 580 N. Courtland St., East Stroudsburg. Doll's vehicle was rammed by Karen Morrissey, 17, of 154 Greene St., Stroud Township, police said.

Driver charged for deaths

By BRUCE POSTEN
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — At his bedside in the General Hospital of Monroe County, Robert Young, Sr., 41, of Tobyhanna was charged with three counts of involuntary manslaughter Tuesday in connection with an accident that took the lives of three young girls.

Young, the operator of a pickup truck traveling east on I-80 last Friday, was driving the truck at a high rate of speed when it went out of control, police said.

The 11 occupants of the truck were thrown from the vehicle; three died and seven were taken to hospitals for treatment of injuries.

Young, suffering from internal injuries, was arraigned before District Magistrate Eleanor Randolph at his hospital bedside at 4:40 p.m. Tuesday.

Tpr. Michael Kish, state police at Swiftwater, presented three charges of involuntary manslaughter after consulting with Monroe County District Attorney James F. Marsh and Daniel G. Warner, county coroner.

Kish said a preliminary hearing was set for 10 a.m. Friday, July 18 before Randolph, but will probably have to be continued because of Young's injuries.

The three girls who died as a result of the truck accident were: Charlotte Deats, 11, and Ann Marie Young, 10, both of East Stroudsburg and Doris McKeegan, 7, of Beaver Brook near Hazleton.

Officials at the General Hospital of Monroe County reported that Robert Deats, 8, formerly in satisfactory condition, was treated and released late Monday.

Injured passengers who are still in the hospital are: Young, fair condition; Robert Young, Jr., 12, of East Stroudsburg, critical condition and Anthony McKeegan, 39, Beaver Brook, guarded condition.

Michelle McKeegan of Beaver Brook was still reported in guarded condition at the Allentown Sacred Heart Hospital Tuesday night.

According to state police at Swiftwater, the accident occurred when the pickup truck glanced off a concrete median and flipped over on its side.

Park meeting

STROUDSBURG — The Monroe County Recreation and Park Commission will meet at 7:30 p.m. July 14 in the civil defense room in the Courthouse basement.

Property tax sale scheduled

STROUDSBURG — Persons who are delinquent in paying their 1973 real estate taxes may lose their property unless they pay before a county tax sale is held Aug. 8.

Thomas R. Joyce, Monroe County treasurer, said his office mailed about 2,600 delinquent tax notices in May in an attempt to get $475,000 worth of back taxes.

Joyce said since then he has received $263,000, leaving about $212,000 to be collected or recovered from the tax sale.

After July 15, a person paying 1973 taxes will have to pay an additional $11 to cover newspaper advertisements of the sale. Delinquent payers are already subject to penalty costs averaging a half per cent a month.

Zoning meeting

EAST STROUDSBURG — The East Stroudsburg Zoning Hearing Board will meet at 7:30 p.m. July 17 in council chambers at the municipal building.

Blomberg's bat, Hunter's arm ignite Yankees

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jim "Catfish" Hunter notched his fifth shutout of the year on a seven-hitter Tuesday night and Ron Blomberg hit a two-run homer to lead the New York Yankees to a 4-0 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Hunter allowed two walks and struck out three in recording his 12th win in 20 decisions. He permitted exactly one baserunner in every inning, but only one Ranger reached third base. It was Hunter's third triumph over Texas this season without a setback.

Blomberg's blast, his fourth, followed a hit by Roy White with one out in the first and helped send Steve Hargan down to his fourth loss in 10 decisions. New York added a run in the second on Terry Whitfield's single, a sacrifice and Fred Stanley's double.

The Yankees scored again in the seventh on a walk to Blomberg and singles by Thurman Munson and pinch-hitter Lou Piniella.

The Yankees have now won 24 of 35 games against Western Division opponents while posting a 20-27 mark against Eastern foes.

Mike Hargrove had three straight hits for Texas, raising his batting average to .341.

Thompson elects to play in ABA

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Atlanta Hawks announced Tuesday night they have lost their No. 1 draft choice, All-America forward David Thompson of North Carolina State, to the Denver Nuggets of the American Basketball Association.

A Hawks' spokesman said word from Larry Fleischer, Thompson's agent, confirmed their worst fears—that the ABA team had nailed the NBA's first draft choice for a price probably over $2 million.

It meant that Denver had made off with Atlanta's first two draft choices—the No. 1 and No. 3 choices in the NBA. The Nuggets earlier signed Marvin Webster, the 7-foot Morgan State center.

"We are certain of the validity of it," the spokesman said of Fleischer's report. "Thompson hasn't talked to us for a week. We have made efforts to reach him and he hasn't returned our calls."

"We are very disappointed," said Bud Seretean, the carpet executive recently named general manager for the Hawks, "but life will go on. I am sure Cotton will do a good job no matter what he has to work with."

The Hawks still have not signed their No. 3 choice—18-year-old forward Bob Willoughby of Englewood, N.J., also drafted by Denver—but were reported "very confident."

Denver earlier had signed Monte Towe. Thompson's diminutive roommate and playmaker at North Carolina State. Towe—another Atlanta draft choice—reportedly got a $50,000 no-out contract for one year.

Atlanta, by dint of a dismal finish and its trade of Pete Maravitch to New Orleans, had the first and third picks in the NBA in this year's draft. It picked Thompson and Webster and lost both.

It was the first time the NBA had lost its No. 1 choice to the ABA.

Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said Thompson visited Denver "when the Nuggets were in the playoffs, and I am sure he was impressed by the full house. He came here when we were playing Seattle in a day game and saw maybe 3,000 people in the big Omni. I'm sure he was not very excited about that."

"I am delighted with the reports that Mr. Thompson has said he wants to play in Denver because that is where we want him to play," said Nugget General Manager-President Carl Scheer. "There is nothing we want more."

Scheer was in New York Tuesday for a meeting with ABA officials but it was considered certain that he also met with Fleischer. Sources close to the Nuggets, however, said it would be probably another week before a formal contract was signed.

"We haven't signed him yet, but we are still trying to," said Scheer. "We are extremely interested in having him in Denver."

If the Nuggets sign Thompson then they must compensate Virginia, which drafted Thompson in the first round of the ABA draft. Several players have been mentioned as possible compensation, including starters Mike Green and Mack Kalvin and reserves Dave Robisch and Jan van Breda Kolff.

Red Sox, 6-5
BOSTON (UPI) — Fred Lynn's pinch-hit single through a drawn-in infield in the ninth inning Tuesday night gave the Boston Red Sox a 6-5 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

The Red Sox, who had seen a 5-1 lead dissipate, mounted their winning rally when Jim Rice beat out an infield hit. Designated hitter Cecil Cooper sacrificed Rice to second and Carlton Fisk was intentionally walked by losing pitcher Tom Johnson, 0-1. Rick Burleson then worked Johnson for another walk to load the bases.

Lynn, sidelined since last weekend with a jammed wrist, pinch-hit for Doug Griffin and hit a slow grounder between first and second to score Rice.

The Red Sox had taken a 5-1 lead after five innings, scoring single runs in each of the first three innings and adding a pair in the fifth when Fisk reached second on a Rod Carew throwing error and scored on Burleson's double. Bob Heise then doubled to drive home Burleson.

But the Twins scored twice in the seventh off Luis Tiant and tied the game at 5-5 with a pair of runs off Dick Drago in the eighth.

Tigers, 3-0

DETROIT (UPI) — Ron LeFlore homered in the fourth inning and rookie Leon Roberts hit a two-run shot in the eighth Tuesday night to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 3-0 victory over the Chicago White Sox for their seventh consecutive triumph.

Joe Coleman, with relief help from John Hiller, allowed only four hits in eight innings of work to post his fifth triumph against 12 losses while Wilbur Wood, who went the distance for Chicago, suffered his 13th loss in 19 decisions.

Coleman, who entered the game with an inflated 6.37 earned run average, struck out six and walked only one while allowing only one runner as far as third base.

Hiller got into trouble with two out in the ninth when he gave up a single and walked two to load the bases, but he struck out Jerry Hairston to end the game.

LeFlore cranked up on a knuckleball and slammed it into the rightfield seats — falling down after he hit it — for his seventh home run of the season in the fourth.

Coleman protected that lead until the eighth when LeFlore singled with one out and, one out later, Roberts followed with his seventh homer of the year.

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Harmon Killebrew sparked a five-run first inning with a two-run double and John Mayberry hammered a three-run homer in the fourth Tuesday night, leading the Kansas City Royals to an 9-1 triumph over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Rookie Dennis Leonard, 5-4 scattered nine hits and was aided by four double plays in going the distance.

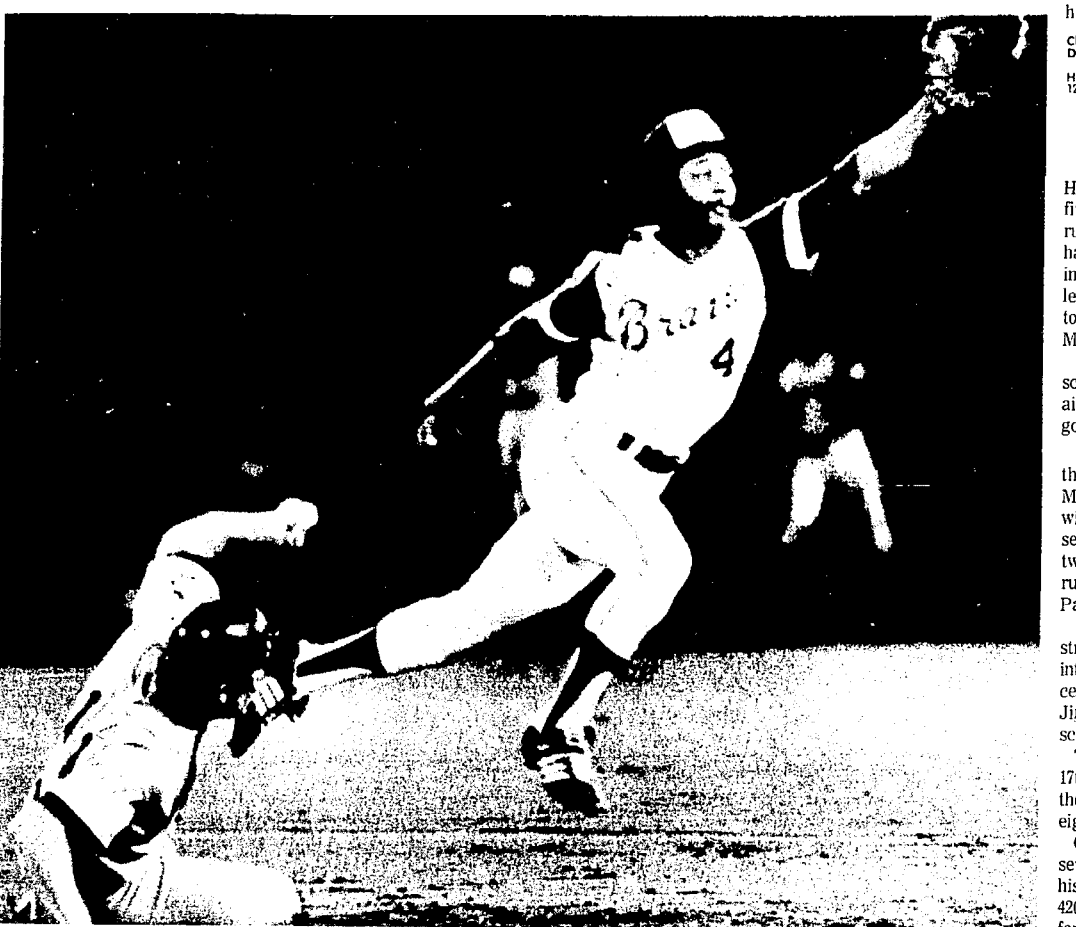

Kansas City sent 11 batters to the plate in the first inning. Hal McRae drove in the first run with his 24th double of the season. Killebrew doubled home two more. Al Cowens drilled a run-scoring single and Fred Patek added a sacrifice fly.

Mayberry continued his hot streak with a three-run homer into the water display in right centerfield in the fourth with Jim Wohlford and McRae scoring ahead of him.

The homer was Mayberry's 17th of the season, his 10th in the last 12 games and his eighth this month.

George Scott opened the seventh for the Brewers with his 16th homer of the season, a 420-footer over the centerfield fence.

Kingman's homer makes Koosman a winner

ATLANTA (UPI) — Dave Kingman hit a three-run homer in the sixth inning Tuesday night to give the New York Mets and Jerry Koosman a 4-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

The Mets were trailing 2-1 when Kingman unloaded his 15th homer of the year following an error by shortstop Larvell Blanks on Felix Millan's grounder and a walk to Joe Torre.

Koosman, now 8-6, allowed only five hits before being lifted for a pinch-batter in the ninth inning. Two of those hits were homers, the first by Earl Williams in the second and the other a solo shot by Clarence Gaston in the fourth.

Wayne Garrett had homered for the Mets in the first inning. The Braves' got their final run in the eighth when Vic Correll walked and scored on singles by Rod Gilbreath and Marty Perez.

Holy Cow! Wall teams up with Rizzuto at Shawnee

It's been four days since Art Wall won the Greater Milwaukee Open. He still finds it hard to believe the whole thing wasn't a dream.

"It's a fantastic feeling," Wall said Tuesday after finishing a round of golf at Shawnee Inn. "I can't really express how I feel. Right now I get kinda choked up about the whole thing."

Wall, who was at Shawnee to participate in a New York Yankee Greats tournament, had gone nine years without a victory on the PGA tour before Milwaukee and he's the first to admit he had some doubts about his career.

"I was getting a little down on myself," Wall said. "I'm not saying this one victory is gonna turn everything around, but for a while it's like being reborn. It was a big shot in the arm for my confidence."

Although Wall had been unable to score under par in any competitive PGA round until the Milwaukee tournament, he really believed his game wasn't all that terrible.

"I wasn't playing too bad a game of golf," he said. "But I wasn't playing good enough to compete on the tour."

Wall thought things were starting to look up when he shot an even par 288 at the Masters for his best four rounds of the season, but after that he said "I went downhill again."

Wall pinpointed the problem with his swing and was able to correct his flaw after reading several articles in a golf magazine.

"I've been fading a lot," he explained. "I never got the club back in the right position. I'm still doing it. It had to do with my left hand, my left arm, and my left shoulder. It gets a little technical, so I'd rather not go into it."

The 51-year-old Honesdale native, who formerly was the touring pro from Pocono Manor, is taking this week off from the PGA tour, but expects to play in the rest of the schedule throughout the summer.

"I'm going to play every week through Labor Day," Wall stated. "Most of the tournaments are here in the East so I think I can do it."

Who said 'Holy Cow' first?

Yankee sportscaster Phil Rizzuto is well known for his cries of "Holy Cow!" whenever he's overcome by an exciting play.

White Sox announcer Harry Caray, who for many years was the voice of the St. Louis Cardinals, uses the same phrase.

Scorching practice rounds make Jack overwhelming pick

Nicklaus heavy British Open favorite

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland (UPI) — What a difference 187 yards, a few sunny days and a tame sea breeze can make.

The Carnoustie Mercantile Golf Club course awaiting Wednesday's opening round of the 104th British Open is a purring pussy cat in comparison with its roaring tiger reputation from the last time the championship was played here in 1968.

For one thing, 187 yards have been whacked off by the people of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews running the $165,000 tournament.

For another, the heavens have baked the course dry with six weeks of rough demolishing sunshine and turned the roaring north sea gales into whispering breezes.

Big Jack Nicklaus has torn the par 72, 7,065 yard remnant apart in four full practice rounds — thrashing 24 strokes off regulation in the process — and is the overwhelming favorite to clinch his 16th major golf title, perhaps in record making style.

"I still think it's the toughest golf course we play," he said, adding "in Carnoustie conditions."

There are no guarantees that the rain and wind won't return to revive this seaside links to the awesome test of man and metal that it can be. Then it would be anyone's tournament.

No one has ever broken 68 in an Open at Carnoustie. Nicklaus first four practice rounds went 67-65-67-65 — adding up to 264 or a sensational 18 strokes better than Ben Hogan's Carnoustie record of 282 set in 1953.

"I don't put too much stock in practice rounds," Nicklaus said. "My swing pattern is good but you have to take that from here and put it into a tournament. I've got confidence it will stay there but you never know."

"You never know what a nice opening round will do for you."

Arnold Palmer said the Open record in 1972 was 276 equalled two years ago by Tom Weiskopf, and he reckons that if the Carnoustie tiger keeps purring, the mark is sure to fall.

"I'm just saying that it's playing easier than I have ever seen it," Palmer said. "I wouldn't be surprised if 272 wouldn't win it."

The bookies have slightly widened Nicklaus' odds to win to 9-2, with Johnny Miller the second favorite at 8-1 and defending champion Gary Player at 10-1.

The likes of lightning-struck and two-time winner Lee Trevino, 1973 champion Tom Weiskopf, Hale Irwin and U.S. Open champion Lou Graham are rated outside shots to win.

Graham winced at the practice round performances of Nicklaus. "When I hear what Nicklaus is doing it scares me," the 37-year-old Graham said. "I hear he is 24-under-par for four practice rounds. If that is so I might just as well pack my bags and go home because I can't shoot 24 under par — that's just unbelievable."

Miller, the 28-year-old Californian, proclaimed the bookies to be out of their minds — that his putting is improving, but remains terrible and that right now, his game is not up to "Nicklaus or that gang."

"I might go out and win it by ten strokes," he said. "But I really don't expect to..."

Palmer predicted 272? Incredible. I don't think anyone will come close. I'd be very surprised if the winner hits 278. There might be a 65 or 66 in the first round, but the guy isn't going to continue that way. I League Eastern Division race.

Although Boston, Milwaukee, and the Yankees are the top three teams at the moment, Rizzuto believes Baltimore is the team to worry about.

"I still think Baltimore is the team to beat," he said. "Whoever beats Baltimore is going to win the American League East."

Ditmar-Lougherty team triumphs

Wall and Rizzuto teamed with two other amateurs to shoot a ten-under-par 61 in scramble play, which looked as though it would be good enough for first place.

But a foursome headed by New York Nets' coach Kevin Lougherty and ex-Yankee pitcher Art Ditmar also posted a 61 and forced a playoff.

On the first playoff hole, the Rizzuto-Wall team had a chance to win, but Rizzuto missed a two-foot putt. "Holy cow," he cried.

On the second playoff hole, the Ditmar-Lougherty foursome totaled 17 strokes, compared to 18 by the Wall-Rizzuto team, and took home first place.

Rizzuto drew some good-natured heckles from the gallery when he put his tee shot on the par three fourth hole in a trap, hit another shot into a sand trap, finally reached the green in four, and three-putted for a seven.

Among the other sports personalities who participated in the tournament were ex-Yankee pitchers Eddie Lopat, Frank "Specs" Shea, and Hal Reniff and Spirits of St. Louis coach Rod Thorn.

Volpe first commissioner as LPGA seeks upturn

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ray Volpe was named first commissioner of the LPGA Tuesday with the expectation that his expertise in marketing would boost the image of lady pro golfers in their battle to attain par in money and recognition with the men.

Volpe comes off a 3½ year stint as vice president, marketing of National Hockey League services and his first priorities are the securing of a television contract and personally contacting every sponsor on the women's golf tour to reacquire them with the value of sticking with the LPGA.

"We wanted an authoritative figure for the job," said LPGA president Carol Mann, a 6-foot lady pro who helped develop the organization during her 15 years on the tour. "Ray comes well recommended — on the suggestion of former NBA commissioner Walter Kennedy — and we're sure his marketing capabilities will reaffirm the LPGA as a guiding force for young women interested in the game."

Miss Mann said that proper reorganization can restore the dignity of women in pro golf. She said lady pros had "received a rotten deal" moneywise in the past and this particular factor inhibited the ambition of younger members of the LPGA.

The LPGA first advertised for a "sports executive" in the Wall Street Journal and New York Times by means of a blind ad. There were over 600 responses, but many withdrew when they learned of plans to move the organization headquarters to New York.

"Volpe, however, was not one of the people answering the ads," Miss Mann said. "Still, he went through the same screening process as the other candidates and if anything a tougher grilling because we were sure Ray was the man we wanted."

Volpe, who will assume the duties held by former executive director Bud Erickson when he takes office on July 21, will receive an estimated $50,000 a year salary.

"The women sought leadership and strength and integrity in the marketing community," Volpe said. "I intend providing these elements in raising the prestige of their tournaments to a level with the men."

Went overboard

By Jean Adams

CHANGE: (Q.) I met Wendy on a blind date. We hit it off really great. For the next week I was in heaven. She was over at my house almost every day. We really liked each other a lot. We talked a lot and told each other our feelings. She told me she liked me a lot and the second week I told her the absolute truth; that is, that I felt love toward her. I didn't lie to her and I think she knew it. A few days later I offered her a friendship ring. She said she couldn't accept it. Two days later I called her to see how she was doing and she sounded very sad. I asked her what was wrong and she said she didn't think we should see each other anymore. After we hung up I cried for almost an hour. Do you think there is any way I can get her back.

most of those lyrics with Billy Rose ... Deborah Kerr's next play will be by husband Peter Viertel and expatriate writer George Axelrod; she'll play an "aging actress" making a comeback with a young New Wave director. Opens in L.A. in Oct., touring eastward to Boston and Broadway. Deborah was crushed by the both-coasts' flop of Edward Albee's "Seascape" ... The trout flop of Tenn. Wms. "Red Battery" play has a deeper tragic story than just its failure.

George Abbott, 88, and Eugene Leonovich, 75, will direct separate N.Y. plays next season: they were a hot romantic item 'way back after Eugene's divorce from Gregory Ratoff ... Jackie Gleason won't get fat fiscally on teenage idol James Taylor's new disc even if its title is the old gloat's "How Sweet It Is!"

Johnny Meyer, the Billionaires' Pal (he's been aide successively to Howard Hughes and Ari Onassis) quietly parted with wife Inez. One of the funny-hooks in the two-year smash "Hot L Baltimore" is Penny Peyser, daughter of Westchester Congressman Peter P.; Penny also plays secatry to sanctimo-

Producer Kermit Bloomgarden didn't want to sell his "Equus" drama down the H'wood drain but was outvoted by author Peter Shaffer and the show's angels; Kermit expects it to run three more years and would have paid everyone more money that way than via the movie ... Ann-Margret really thinks the Shah of Iran and Pres. Jerry Ford might be at her Las Vegas Hilton opening; they all got tres chummees at the White House bash for the Shah. How much sleep for good health?

As I grow older I find that my need for sleep diminishes. There once was a time when I needed 10 hours of sleep. Now, at 65, I seem to get along on five hours. Do doctors find that this commonly happens?

Mr. J.B., W. Va.

Dear Mr. B.: Patterns of sleep do not fit into any general rule. These sleep patterns may vary with age, with freedom from emotional tensions and with the general state of good health. It is well known that people can slowly retrain their sleep habits and reduce the need for many hours of sleep without endangering health. Far too many people have a preconceived idea about how much sleep they need. They go into an emotional tailspin if they fail to have the exact number of hours they allocate for themselves. The body is a remarkably wise machine and knows how to adjust sleep requirements. It should not be a source of concern to you that your need for sleep is different now than it formerly was. Your body exertions may be less and, consequently, the hours needed for sleep rejuvenation are reduced.

Can vibrating machines be used for reducing? I see them advertised and I'm tempted.

Mrs. F.A., R.I.

Dear Mrs. A.: These machines have little or no value in losing weight. Beware of those who use these machines as another technique of exploiting the gullible public who are desperately seeking new methods of losing weight. Vibrating machines are excellent for giving added tone and support to body muscles. They are not, however, a substitute for the simple rule of losing weight. That is, when you consume more calories in your food than your body expends in energy, a gain in weight is inevitable.

Most structural spinal disorders are due to neglect or lack of proper care to the neck and back following minor falls and accidents. Research has shown that a small painless spinal distortion may gradually increase WITHOUT SYMPTOMS over a period of many months or years. During this period the spine shifts slowly until finally an awkward step or unusual exercise brings about a severe and prolonged SPINAL DISABILITY. A regular professional spinal care program enables your Chiropractor to more adequately protect you through EARLY DISCOVERY OF SPINAL DEFECTS.

Sheldon Leonard doing it again

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Sheldon Leonard has done it all in show biz and he's going to do it again.

The man who tickled funny bones as Jack Benny's race-track tout — "Hey, Bud, you want a sure thing in the sixth?" — has been actor, writer, director and producer. Now he is returning to greasepaint as the star of a new series.

An amusing, articulate man, Leonard has a perpetual sun tan and a permanent leer in his voice.

He will put both to use in "Big Eddy," the saga of a bigshot businessman who operates just this side of the law, not forgetting his bruised knuckle youth.

Stardom, however, is a menacing prospect to Leonard who remained behind the scenes while producing "My World and Welcome To It," "I Spy," "The Andy Griffith Show" and a half dozen others.

"When I was an actor I was a foot soldier in the field," he said. "It was a comfortable job without strain."

"I was always two steps behind Myrna Loy and William Powell walking into theaters for a premiere. Nobody bothered me when I toured with Bogart or Cagney."

"I did a hundred movies and stood by with pity for the big stars surrounded by admirers who swarmed over them like flies."

"They painfully put up with the adulation. I felt sorry for them."

"Once in Miami Beach when I was producing 'The Dick Van Dyke Show' Dick arrived for a convention, dog tired after a midnight jet flight. I was able to sun myself around the pool, relaxing."

"But Dick spent an hour and a half — out on his feet — posing for pictures with fans and signing autographs. My only thought was how to rescue him."

Now Leonard faces the same sort of hysteria. He's already had a taste of it.

"I went to the network's (CBS) big affiliate dinner as a star the other night and the flashbulbs were trained on me and my wife for a change.

"That gave me a foretaste of what will happen if this show becomes a hit. I admit it's grand for your ego. Cream is good for the calcium in your body, too. But too much can kill you."

"So I'm being sucked into a whole new world. Someone should make a study of the effects of adulation on a human being. Let me give you an example."

"John Garfield and I shared a dressing room on Broadway in 'Having A Wonderful Time.' We became buddies. John was a street kid, tough, poor and with no manners."

"A year later he was a movie star. When I came to Hollywood he invited me to his mansion for dinner. A butler took my coat and we had cocktails and canapes in the library. Dinner was in a formal dining room."

"John still had rough edges and a Bronx accent, but he loved elegance. I knew adulation had got to him when the butler served me the first course from my right."

"Garfield jumped up and cried, 'You dummy, always serve from the left!'"

"That's what adulation can do. It also got Andy Griffith to wear shoes."

God only knows what it will do to Sheldon Leonard. He already wears shoes. And he's rich enough to hire a platoon of butlers who know their right from their left.

Then again, maybe he needn't worry. His show, "Big Eddy," is slotted against "Sanford and Son" — and look what adulation did for Redd Foxx.

Bit Parts: Universal will produce the life story of Errol Flynn . . . Michael Caine will star in "Operation Banderanatch" for Diocuri Productions . . . Gary Merrill and Patricia Neal will guest star in the first "Movin' On" episode of the fall television season.

Fooling mother nature pays off for fisherman.

SEATTLE (UPI) — It isn't nice to fool Mother Nature but the coho fishermen of Puget Sound are quite happy the State Fisheries Department did just that.

The coho or silver salmon is a pelagic fish meaning it cruises close to the surface and its streaking runs and soaring leaps especially on light tackle are sheer delight to anglers.

They're back in Puget Sound in large numbers now after an absence of nearly 20 years thanks to the little trick the fisheries men played on Mother Nature.

At one time, fishermen took coho in good numbers on the Sound but starting in 1957 the bottom dropped out of that fishery. Seems the silvers produced by the state's hatcheries did not linger in the Sound but rather took off and cruised the west coast of Canada's Vancouver Island.

Then someone got the idea of trying to keep the cohos down on the Sound. It was found that the longer a young salmon is kept around a hatchery or rearing pen, the more likely he is to lose his urge to head for the sea when released and instead will probably spend his entire life in the sound, often within a few miles of his release site.

"It's something of a tailor-made fishery for state fishermen and we're delighted," said Frank Haw of the Fisheries Department.

Now the coho are thick particularly in the Tacoma Narrows area and in the Seabeck region of Hood Canal. They currently weigh in at from 3 to 4 pounds and will add another pound or two to that before the season peaks next month.

During 1957, the last big year for resident coho, the record sport catch for inner Puget Sound waters was 220,000 fish.
